

U. S. Will Meet Piracy With Force, President Warns Nazis

Will Not Yield Rights on Sea, F. D. R. Asserts

Strong Message on Robin Moor Sinking Sent to Congress.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
WASHINGTON, June 20.—President Roosevelt warned Nazi Germany, in effect but unmistakably today, that if it persists in such acts of "piracy" as the sinking of the S. S. Robin Moor, this nation will resist with force.

The destruction of that vessel must be construed, he said in a special message to congress, as essentially part of a German plan for world domination, a first step in an effort to grasp control of the seas.

Serving notice that Germany would be expected to make "full reparations," he summarized his attitude in four brief and defiant sentences:

Not Willing To Yield.

"We must take the sinking of the Robin Moor as a warning to the United States not to resist the Nazi movement of world conquest. It is a warning that the United States may use the high seas of the world only with Nazi consent.

"Were we to yield on this we would inevitably submit to world domination at the hands of the present leaders of the German reich.

"We are not yielding and we do not propose to yield."

As the President's communication went to the capitol, State Department officials were busy preparing a formal protest to be forwarded to Berlin. But it was plain, nevertheless, that the chief executive's message was intended as much for the attention of Berlin as of congress.

DNB Given Copy.

Together with American newspapermen, a representative of the German news agency DNB was given a copy of the message in advance of its delivery to the house and senate and it is probable that Berlin officials knew the gist of its contents as soon as congress did.

(In Berlin, a German spokesman declined for the present to comment on the message. He said, however, it was carefully noted.

In London the newspaper Daily Express said "clearly this sort of undeclared war cannot go on without reaching a breach." Other papers gave smash play to the message and editorial comment expressed hearty approval.

An announcement that an important message on foreign affairs would be sent to the capitol came unexpectedly at mid-morning. Mr. Roosevelt canceled his usual Friday morning press conference to gain time for its preparation and consulted Sumner Welles, the undersecretary of state, on its contents.

To all intents and purposes the message said that this government considered Germany was trying to intimidate this nation into acquiescence in the Nazi plans by such acts of "cruelty" as the sinking of the Robin Moor. Then he enunciated what the opposing policy of this government would be—resistance.

May Arm Merchantment.

But he did not say what form that resistance would take, nor give any intimation or how the United States intends to counter future attacks upon its shipping. This, of course, left the capital speculating avidly on what would be done.

Several courses were suggested: American merchant ships may be armed to fight off attacking submarines, some thought. The President said on Tuesday that the Navy had had plans for such a course in its files since 1918, but that as of the time he spoke, at least, he had made no request that they be taken out of the files.

Some believed that increased

Hope Is Abandoned for 33 Officers, Men On Sub Trapped in Water 402 Feet Deep; Wreckage From Craft Shoots to Surface

Ford Signs Union Shop CIO Contract

Historic Union Agreement To Cover 120,000 Workers.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP)—The Ford Motor Company, last of the big nonunion firms in the automobile industry, signed a contract with CIO's United Auto Workers' Union today, agreeing to a union shop and dues check-off.

The conclusion of the history-making pact after a fortnight of negotiations took place in the office of CIO President Philip Murray and in the presence of Harry Bennett, Ford personnel director, and more than a score of company and union representatives.

By the signing of the agreement, Ford becomes the first big producer in the motor car field to install a union shop and the check-off system by which the company deducts union dues from the pay envelopes and pays them over to the union treasury.

Under the terms of the union shop clause, all Ford workers must remain or become members of the CIO union. The union, in turn, agreed to accept all Ford workers into its ranks. A union shop differs from a closed shop in that, under the closed shop, the union usually supplies the labor force. (Approximately 750 employees in the Atlanta Ford plant will be affected.)

Odie Fluker Escapes From Prison Farm

Carroll County Officers Searching for Slayer of Eddie Guyol.

Odie Fluker, convicted in 1936 of the sensational "driveaway" killing of Atlanta's lottery king, Eddie Guyol, escaped shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon from a Carroll county prison farm near Carrollton.

Warden Cecil Otwell, who directed a searching party until late last night, said Fluker apparently made his escape through a pre-arranged meeting with friends in an automobile, who waited for him on a state highway a few miles from the camp.

A trusty since he came to the camp last March, Fluker was attached to the kitchen staff. He was last seen in the prison yard, and because of his status was able to walk about freely.

His flight is the second that has occurred at the Carroll camp in the past five years. Warden Otwell, however, said that police in several states were "working on a good clue and that 'the identity of the friends was strongly suspected.'"

Fluker was arrested on August 28, 1936, soon after Guyol had been shot and killed while sitting with his wife in the driveway of their home in Morganside. He was sentenced to die on November 11, but after numerous appeals his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by the Board of Penal Corrections on September 7, 1939.

Planes Moving Fast as Sound Give Engineers New Problem

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—(AP)—hour in air—but certain points on the plane's surface do go faster. Accurate measurement of the temperature and air pressure is needed, the two engineers explained, as a guide to refinement in plane design.

When an object moves through air at a speed lower than that of sound, it is preceded by sound waves, but when the object goes faster than sound it is unheralded and its impact with the air causes an abrupt increase in temperature and pressure.

Mathematical studies looking toward correction of the irregular behavior of measuring and recording instruments at such speeds were discussed. The calculations by Dr. Emmons and Dr. Brainerd showed how it may be possible to make precise corrections.

Governor Calls For 3 Regents To Quit Posts

Chairman Sandy Beaver, Vice Chairman Hunter, Bell Affected.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Governor Talmadge yesterday snapped his red suspenders and knocked three members, including the chairman and vice chairman, off the State Board of Regents.

He called for the resignations of General Sandy Beaver, chairman; E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, vice chairman, and Miller Bell, of Milledgeville, recently named to the board by Talmadge to succeed his late father, and declared that he had to do it because they were holding office in violation of a 1937 law limiting board membership to seven persons with the same Alma Mater.

Two for Cocking.

His action gave rise to speculation that in this manner he will oust Dean Walter D. Cocking from the pay roll of the University of Georgia. Hunter and Bell Monday joined with six members of the board in voting down Talmadge and six other members in their efforts to dislodge the dean on charges he advocated social equality for Negroes. If the Governor contends that Beaver, Bell and Hunter were holding office (under his appointment) illegally, then it was said the official vote of the board on Cocking might be changed to seven to six against employment of the dean, instead of eight to seven for.

Talmadge, in a move which took observers by surprise, said the legal department had pointed out to him the 1937 law limiting board membership from institutions. There were 10 graduates of the University of Georgia, not including the Governor himself, who is ex-officio member of the regents.

Last 3 Appointees.

Beaver, Hunter and Bell were the last three appointees of the Governor to the board.

Beaver, located last night by The Constitution in New York, where he was attending the Naval Corps Intelligence Service graduation of Herman Talmadge, the Governor's son, said he would wait until his return home for comment about the matter. He appeared surprised that he had been asked to resign.

Bell, in Milledgeville, Hunter, in Savannah, said they had no comment to make.

The Governor requested their resignations in identical letters, a copy of which follows:

"I was much surprised when one of the assistant attorney generals

Federal Funds For June Relief Are Released

$307,217 Issued After Board Ends Study of Merit System.

Georgia's June allotment of federal funds for social security benefits—held up while the state's merit system for welfare workers was scrutinized—were released yesterday afternoon in Washington by the Social Security Board.

The sum was $307,217 for old-age assistance, aid to the blind and for dependent children.

Max McRae, assistant director of the Georgia Welfare Department, who went to Washington with Director Brick Miller and J. A. Boatright, merit examinations head, said that although no definite agreement about points in dispute between federal and state officials had been worked out, he thought the groundwork had been laid for ironing out pending problems.

McRae said that the two principal problems still unsettled related to the Governor's power to discharge welfare employees for cause after a hearing and to the qualifications to be required of applicants for jobs.

The removal power of the Governor runs counter to customary civil service procedure providing for the welfare director to fire merit system employees for cause after a hearing, he said, but he expressed confidence this hitch could be overcome, adding, "I don't see any difficulty between this board and Washington that cannot be worked out."

Rainey, Outweighed as Conn, Apparently Outpointed by Mann.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Royal K. Mann, hefty member of the State Prison and Patrol Commission, and Clem Rainey, slender commission chairman, engaged in fistfuffs after a heated argument yesterday morning in the prison commission offices in the state capitol.

Both men drew blood in the swiftly ended encounter, but Rainey, outweighed by Mann more than Conn was by Louis, apparently got the worst of it. He had several marks on his forehead and a swollen lip, while Mann apparently had only one small scratch on his face. Seen at his office late yesterday afternoon, Rainey wiped his face with a blood-stained handkerchief.

Mann gave the "bum's rush" to soft-spoken, brown-eyed Carolyn McKenzie, Constitution reporter-photographer, yesterday afternoon when she went to interview him at his office. After denying that he was Royal Mann even while she watched him sign letters "Royal K. Mann," the big prison commissioner from Greenville grabbed her camera, pushed her through the door and slammed it against her heels.

Sent for "Sheriff."

He then sent a porter to call the "sheriff" and Miss McKenzie was advised by others she might be arrested if she stayed there. She stayed but no arrest was made. When another Constitution reporter and a photographer arrived on

Allies Smash Into Principal Damascus Line

Attackers Met, However, by Severe Artillery Fire.

JERUSALEM, June 20.—(AP)—Allied forces attacking the historic Syrian capital of Damascus today pushed into the main lines of the city's defenses under a severe artillery fire, a British military spokesman announced tonight.

French resistance stiffened today, he said, as the attackers reached the "last lap" in operations for capture of the capital which the French governor, General Henri Dentz, refused to surrender on British demand that it be an open city to avoid bloodshed and destruction.

Heavy French artillery replied to the British batteries as the Allies closed in.

British and Indian troops which pushed forward to Mezze air-drome about 3½ miles west of Damascus were hotly engaged there, and the spokesman described their positions as uncertain.

To the south numerically superior Vichy forces were said to have counterattacked Free French troops in the neighborhood of Jebel el Kelb, but the Allies still held the railroad and highway leading back to Transjordan.

Divers Ready To Descend If O-9 Is Located

Vessel Believed Crushed by Tremendous Water Pressure.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 20.—Crushed by the tremendous pressure of a 402-foot depth, the sunken submarine O-9 began to disintegrate tonight and death of all of her 33 officers and men was unofficially acknowledged by the Navy.

After a day of desperate search for the craft by a sizeable Navy fleet, and with her exact location still uncertain, one high Navy officer viewed wreckage that shot to the surface and said he held no hope that the men on the ocean floor could have lived.

Officially, however, the Navy refused to give up.

Bubbles Seen.

Searchlights of the rescue fleet were trained through the night on the spot where oil slicked the surface for 1,000 square feet, where occasional air bubbles rose, with bits of cork from the inner hull of the submarine and pieces of deck grating sometimes spotting the surface.

Four of the Navy's most expert divers stood at ready on the deck of the rescue ship Falcon. Helium was rushed from the Portsmouth Navy Yard, approximately 18 miles from the scene, in the event the divers went down. Officers reported the men could descend to 500 feet if necessary.

Another batch of helium, 9,000 cubic feet, was loaded aboard two trucks at the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., for an all-night trip to Portsmouth. Lieutenant Commander George Watson, public relations officer, said the cargo was requested by officials directing rescue operations at Portsmouth.

Dragging Suspended.

Rear Admiral John D. Wainwright said dragging operations had been officially suspended for the night, which would definitely seal the fate of the crew if any were still alive, but the Falcon kept a magnetic drag over the side.

(A method locating metal objects, such as ship hulks on the bottom, consists of the use of two magnetic coils, towed at some distance apart. An induction is set up between the two and if a metal object appears between them the current is diminished. A reading shows whether the break in the current is nearer to one or the other of the coils, thereby giving the location of the hull.)

Lieutenant Commander Edmund F. Jewell, returning from the scene, told newsmen that if the magnet should be attracted to the O-9 during the night, divers would go down. Only if a line was attached to the submarine, which lay not far from where the Squallus sank in 1939, could the rescue

Partly Cloudy Weather, Continued Warm, Seen

Here's the weather for Atlanta today, according to the forecast issued yesterday by the United States Weather Bureau: Partly cloudy and continued warm, with temperature extremes between 68 and 94 degrees.

The extended forecast from June 20 through June 25, predicts partly cloudy weather, with temperatures above normal and no rain expected before tomorrow or Monday, when only light showers are likely.

Temperature extremes here yesterday were 71 and 87 degrees.

Georgian Barely Missed Dive; Had Orders for Duty on O-9

Ensign Jones Was To Have Reported in N. Y. Yesterday.

CHATSWORTH, Ga., June 20.—Ensign John Francis Jones, of Chatsworth, was under orders to report for service on the submarine O-9 which failed to return to the surface after a test dive off Portsmouth, N. H., yesterday, but after announcement of the disaster the Navy said that Ensign Jones was not aboard.

Jones, 19, is the son of Dr. J. S. Jones, Chatsworth dentist. He enlisted in the Naval Training Reserve unit in September, 1940, after his graduation from North Georgia College, at Dahlonega.

He was in training until December when he returned to his home here where he remained until March, when he returned to the training unit and was commissioned an ensign on June 6.

After receiving orders for duty on the O-9, he left here Wednesday afternoon and was to report in New York this morning.

SUB'S ROSTER OF THOSE ABOARD

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 20. (P)—Lieutenant Commander George C. Crawford announced today that two officers and 31 crew members were aboard the missing submarine O-9 when she sailed yesterday from New London, her home port, for the trials off Portsmouth, N. H.

Her commander was Lieutenant Howard J. Abbott, of Osceola, Iowa. The only other officer aboard, Commander Crawford said, was Ensign M. P. Wangness, a Naval Reservist, of San Diego, California.

Members of the crew were:

Marvin D. Barry, seaman, 2d class; Manhattan, Kan.
W. R. Cannady, electrician's mate, 3d class, Blytheville, Ark.
William F. Crute, seaman, 2d class, Halifax, Va.
John F. DuFresne, machinist's mate, 1st class, Great Barrington, Mass.
Charles E. Eagleton, signalman, 3d class, Del Norte, Cal.
John H. Edwards, mess attendant, 3d class, Itabena, Miss.
H. T. Post, quartermaster, 3d class, Hancock, Md.
Edward G. Foster, chief machinist's mate, Seattle, Wash.
James D. Fowler, chief machinist's mate, Littlemore, N. C.
Bob A. Gardner, torpedoman, 3d class, Alsea, Ore.
N. Gersen, seaman, Bronx, N. Y.
James E. Gillies, fireman, 1st class, Port Richmond, N. Y.
Francis H. Golden, fireman, 2d class, Holyoke, Mass.
F. A. Griffiths, seaman, 2d class, Bellfountain, Ohio.
Francis L. Gruen, torpedoman, 2d class, Greenville, Ill.
Henry J. Gunn, machinist's mate, 1st class, Gatt, Neb.
Joe A. Harting, ship's cook, 2d class, Ardmore, Okla.
Cedric L. Hendy, radioman, 1st class, Mountain View, Cal.
Walter J. Jaskowski, fireman, 3d class, Brooklyn, N. Y.
William C. Kaufman, machinist's mate, 2d class, Indianapolis.
Devitt E. Krueger, torpedoman, 3d class, San Diego, Cal.
John H. Lister, electrician's mate, 2d class, Watford, Conn.
Chester L. Miller, quartermaster, 2d class, Fairbury, Pa.
Emile A. Ouellette, seaman, 2d class, Cape Falls, Va.
F. P. Schneider, fireman, 3d class, New York City.
John C. Sonnenberg, chief electrician's mate, San Diego, Cal.
James S. Strang, yeoman, 3d class, Indianapolis.
Thomas W. Tillery Jr., machinist's mate, 1st class, New London.
Earl V. Varner, chief machinist's mate, Los Angeles.
Bernard J. Venhaus, seaman, 2d class, Lawrence, Neb.

Senate Votes $936,390,000 Relief Fund

Request for Elimination of WPA Restrictions Ignored.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(P)—Without a record vote, the senate approved today a relief fund of $936,390,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, but ignored President Roosevelt's request for elimination of a number of existing restrictions on WPA.

The measure now goes back to the house for consideration of $50,485,000 of senate increases as well as numerous other amendments.

Both the senate and house approved the $875,000,000 asked by the President to provide WPA jobs for an estimated 1,000,000 persons during the 12 months beginning July 1. This was a sharp reduction below the $1,381,000,000 available for WPA during the present fiscal year, when an average of 1,700,000 persons were employed.

WPA headquarters already has notified state and local offices that some 400,000 persons must be dropped from relief jobs by the first week in July.

Thinking Gun a Toy, Tot Wounds Cousin

Picking up a .32-caliber revolver which he thought was a toy, five-year-old Hugh Leatherwood Jr., of Montgomery, Ala., last night shot his cousin, Patricia Ann White, also 5, in the left hand.

The little girl, who was treated and dismissed at Grady hospital, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. White, of 1892 Belmont avenue, S. W. Mrs. White said the boy was a visitor.

TWO ENSIGNS, TWO STORIES—Ensign M. P. Wangness, right, was one of the two officers aboard the submarine O-9 yesterday when it made its tragic dive off the Isle of Shoals. Luckier was Ensign John Francis Jones, of Chatsworth, Ga., who left his home Wednesday under orders to report for duty aboard the ill-fated sub. Jones was to have reported in New York yesterday. Navy officials said he was not aboard the craft.

All 33 on O-9 Are Feared Lost

bell be used. The bell saved 33 of the Squalus' 59 men in a series of sensational dives.

Line Necessary.

Without a line to the surface the O-9's men had no hope of using their "Momsen lungs," with which men have come up from great depths by ascending in easy stages. An ascent without a retarding line would mean instant death.

Looking out toward the rescue fleet, Admiral Wainwright said: "If she's down 400 feet I don't know what they can do."

Jewell said he had not given up all hope. He asserted that, although the submarine undoubtedly was punctured, it might be possible that some compartments still remained intact.

Location Not Exact.

He added that air bubbles at least showed "there is still air in the ship," but that even the oil slick and the wreckage did not give the exact location of the O-9 because the tide might shift them before they reached the surface.

"There's a slight chance that some may be alive," Jewell said. Asked on what he based that statement, he replied laconically: "Hope."

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, who flew up from Washington, said in his near-by Manchester home that he had not abandoned hope. But he added the depth of the submarine was a discouraging factor. The Squalus was only at 240 feet when a majority of her men were saved.

Obstacles Apparent. "The marvelous rescue of 33 men from the Squalus was effected at the greatest depth ever successfully handled," Knox said. "Consequently, if the O-9 should be discovered at a greater depth, then the obstacles in the way of a successful rescue, if any are alive in the hull, will be appreciated."

The O-9, one of the nation's oldest submarines and only recently recommissioned after a decade of idleness, went into a deep trial dive at 7:56 o'clock, Eastern Standard time, this morning.

About two hours later a smoke bomb distress signal came to the surface.

Sighted by Falcon. A frantic search followed, but no sound came from the O-9, nor was any direct contact made, until the rescue ship Falcon, one of a dozen Navy vessels which rushed to the scene, radioed shortly before 8 p. m.

"Have picked up painted cork, pieces of O-9 deck grating, oil slick, air bubbles, depth 67 fathoms," the Falcon reported.

The submarine previously had been reported at a depth of 370 feet, although it was built to stand only the pressure of a 200-foot depth. The Falcon's report placed her at 402 feet.

Likely From Hull. An officer who returned from the scene reported that it appeared that the cork bits had come from the inside of the hull, and that this was a bad sign for the men below.

Admiral Wainwright said searchlights would be trained on the water where the wreckage rose throughout the night, but indicated other operations would be suspended until daylight. He added: "We must wait until daylight."

Rescue Ships Speeded.

The craft was commanded by Lieutenant Howard J. Abbott, of Osceola, Iowa, and the only other officer aboard was Ensign M. P. Wangness, a naval reservist from San Diego, Cal. The crew had been assembled from all sections of the country, with many of them from the west coast.

The Navy quickly shot all available rescue equipment to the scene. It was within a few miles of the spot where the submarine Squalus went down in May, 1939, when 33 of the 59 men aboard were rescued by means of a diving bell.

Divers on Scene.

Twenty-one expert divers were flown here from the Washington navy yard. More flew from the New London, Conn., submarine base. A diving bell similar to that of the Squalus rescue was rushed from New London aboard the salvage vessel Chewink.

The rescue ship Falcon, king pin in the Squalus rescue, was at the scene almost from the beginning. Other Navy craft sped to Portsmouth under forced draft.

Officers said the diving bell could be used on the O-9, despite the craft's lack of other safety features.

The O-9 was equipped with special hatches fore and aft to receive the mouth of the Navy's diving bell, a spokesman for the Philadelphia Navy Yard said.

Special Hatches.

The special hatches were installed when the O-9 was recommissioned at the navy yard a few months ago, the spokesman added. But the great depth at which the O-9 was reported threw fear into many navy hearts. At New London Lieutenant Commander George C. Crawford expressed confidence that the submarine could withstand the pressure of 370 feet. Others said, however, she might possibly be crushed.

Crawford said divers could work at that depth, but the difficulties were tremendous. The Squalus lay at only 240 feet, and the divers who worked on her were declared heroes.

The men aboard the O-9 were equipped with "Momsen lungs," but these cannot be used until a line is stretched from the submarine to the surface to permit a slow ascent.

One of Oldest. The O-9 was one of the nation's oldest submarines. She had been lying idle for ten years. In 1935 she was decommissioned, but was recommissioned June 1 of this year as part of the defense program, and was undergoing her first extensive trials. She is 133 feet long and has an escape hatch and water-tight compartments.

It was the underwater silence that bothered Navy men most during the day. The O-9 was equipped with an underwater radio and an oscillator, or sound-making device used in signaling through water.

In midafternoon the Boston Navy yard reported that "searching vessels think they have located underwater sounds," but hours dragged on without further word.

Squalus Easy Job. Locating the Squalus was a comparatively easy matter compared to the search for the O-9. The Squalus had just been built, and was equipped with a safety device which enabled the men trapped aboard her to send up a buoy, which both set off smoke signals and contained a telephone.

The 33 men on the Squalus who eventually were pulled to the surface would have been saved hours earlier had not the telephone line and cable broken in the heavy swells during a conversation with a sister submarine. It took hours of dragging to get another line on the Squalus from the surface.

Fourth Disaster. Raising the submarine and her crew of 26 dead was extremely difficult, and it was not until late summer that the water-filled craft finally was towed into Portsmouth. Huge pontoons were used to bring her part way to the surface, but time and again the Squalus broke away, shot to the surface and plunged to the bottom again, throwing off her chains and pontoons.

The sinking of the O-9 was the fourth submarine disaster in New

RESCUE DUTY—Again yesterday the Falcon, kingpin in the rescue of 33 men from the Squalus in 1939, was called to help men trapped in another underwater craft. But last night it became apparent her efforts would be less successful when wreckage from the O-9, which failed to return to the surface after a test dive, was sighted in water 402 feet deep. The O-9, ancient submersible recently ordered back into service, was trapped in the area off the Isle of Shoals near where the Squalus tragedy occurred. Thirty-three officers and men were aboard the O-9, and virtually no hope was held for their rescue. Observers expressed fear the craft had been crushed.

McGill Tells of Dive Last Week In Sub Very Similar to the O-9

By RALPH MCGILL.

A week ago last Wednesday I was one of 11 newspaper correspondents who took a dive in the submarine R-10 in the waters of Long Island sound near New London, Conn.

The R-10 type boats were built at the same time the "O" type boats were built, such as the O-9, which was reported lost in 370 feet of water off Portsmouth. The only difference was 166 feet in length for the R-boats, as against 172 for the O-boats. Both had the same beam, 18 feet, and both had the same power, two sets of Diesels for surface power and two electric motors for use when submerged.

All of us stopped, while walking on deck before the dive, to look at the two buoys, fitted into the deck with about half their roundness showing.

They each had neat little brass plates on them on which one might read:

"Submarine sunk here. Telephone inside."

These buoys may be released if a submarine is in distress. Their lines should reach at least 250 feet but it is dubious if they reach 300 or more. The idea was that the floating buoy would attract attention and a telephone connection with the sub would enable the officers and crew to give their condition and also to aid the rescuers in their work.

No mention of any buoy of this type has been made. The O-9 apparently is in water too deep for the buoys to reach the surface or the lines have fouled.

Air in a submarine of the O-9 type should last about 14 hours before turning on the oxygen machines which the sub should have. The air should be able to sustain them for 36 hours. Men in the R-10 boasted they often had gone 14 hours on their original supply of air before turning on the oxygen fresheners.

Sabotage hardly is to be considered. The sub was a training ship.

Credits Are Released

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP)—The Treasury tonight "thawed" the frozen assets of Sweden and Switzerland, indicating that the two countries had given assurances that their credits would not be used to the advantage of Axis or Axis-occupied nations.

General licenses were issued exempting Swiss and Swedish funds from President Roosevelt's order of last Saturday which tied up approximately $2,500,000,000 of German and Italian funds and property and the American holdings of a number of other countries.

Release of the Swiss holdings, sources here said, involved approximately $1,400,000,000. Figures on Swedish credits in the United States were not available.

Brother Will Carry On For Submarine Victim

BLYTEVILLE, Ark., June 20. (P)—If "Dub" Cannady is dead, his brother will carry on for him in the Navy.

Told today that "Dub"—W. R. Cannady, 21—was missing with the crew of the submarine O-9, his only brother, Marshall, paled slightly, then squared his shoulders and said:

"If he's gone I'll take up where he left off."

Marshall, 27, joined the Navy June 6 and is scheduled to report for duty at the Navy office in Memphis, Tenn., Monday. The boys also have two uncles who served in the navy.

England waters. Prior to the Squalus, the S-4 went down off Provincetown, Mass., with all hands lost, and in 1925 the S-51 was rammed and sank off Block Island, R. I., with 33 dead.

"Behind Schedule." At Central Falls, R. I., Mrs. Omer Ouellette, mother of a crewman on the O-9, said her son had written her a few days ago that the submarine was "a little behind schedule" in its dives and was trying to "catch up."

She said he told of the O-9's plans to leave New London, Conn., for Portsmouth, N. H., and wrote: "We go there to make our deep dive because there is deep water right along the coast. We should be back by next Saturday."

"We have a certain amount of dives to make and we're a little behind schedule in making them. That means we'll have to go out on weekends to catch up, so that leaves me behind the eight-ball in regards to getting weekends off."

Relief Issue Is Withdrawn in Alpharetta Case

WPA Report Shows Residents Receiving Aid Were Certified.

John A. Burgess, chairman of a special subcommittee of the Fulton grand jury investigating charges that transients and migrants are on relief and WPA rolls in the Alpharetta section of north Fulton county, yesterday announced that the complaint filed with the grand jury has been withdrawn and that Thomas C. Dickson, administrator of the Fulton county department of public welfare, has been given a clean bill in connection with the matter.

As Burgess was making his announcement, Dickson exhibited a WPA survey of relief participants from the area which was filed with him during the day. It was emphatic in denying that non-residents of Fulton county are participating and said that all were residents at the time they were certified.

"The allegation that persons employed on the work program in the Alpharetta community are transients or migrants are not legitimate residents of Fulton county is entirely false as is indicated by these facts," the report read.

Group Votes To Extend Devaluation Powers

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(UP)—The Senate Banking Committee today approved, without a record vote, a house bill extending President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation powers and the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund until June 30, 1943.

The powers are scheduled to expire next June 30. Committee members said the bill was not amended.

Submarines Have Cost Lives Of 139 Americans in 27 Years

Most Recent Disaster Was That of the Squalus, Which Went Down Two Years Ago With 33 Saved and 26 Dead; 40 Lost in 1927.

By The Associated Press. During the last 27 years 139 American naval men have perished as the result of disaster overtaking five United States submarines.

The greatest in loss of life and the most terrifying of them all was the collision on December 17, 1927, of the S-4 and the Coast Guard vessel Paulding. Forty men died as the S-4 sank in 100 feet of water off Provincetown, Mass.

Rescue crews heard signs of life and frantically fought to free the imprisoned men. Hours later, when divers pierced the torpedo tube with an oxygen hose, it was too late.

The most recent disaster was the sinking of the Squalus off White Island, N. H., May 23, 1939. Thirty-three men were saved with a diving bell, thus used for the first time, but 26 died.

Within a month of the Squalus sinking came disasters which took the lives of 91 British and 71 French sailors. On June 1 the British submarine Thetis sank in Liverpool Bay and on June 15 the French submarine Phenix sank off the coast of French Indo-China.

Other American disasters were: March 24, 1915—F-4 sank in Honolulu Bay, 21 dead. December 17, 1917—F-1 rammed and sunk by submarine F-3 during maneuvers off San Diego, Cal., 19 dead.

September 25, 1925—S-51 sank off Block Island, R. I., by steamer City of Rome, 33 dead.

third member of the prison commission, was in his office down the corridor and did not see the encounter, it was said.

Rainey said the argument started over a routine case that had no significance. A person named "Smith" was granted a parole by the board and Mann complained of a delay in writing up the decision, it was said.

Mann was quoted as saying Rainey shook his finger in Mann's face and that Mann told him, "If you don't take your finger out of my face, I'll slap you a somersault." Though he talked with a Constitution editor during the afternoon, Mann could not be located by reporters at his office or residence later for a statement.

The encounter took place yesterday morning about 10 o'clock at the doorway of Mann's office, which adjoins that of Chairman Rainey. Judge Vivien Stanley,

LeCraw Names U. S. Treasury City Leaders to Warns Offices MediationBody Of New Move

Smith and Arkwright Accepted by Labor Officials Here:

Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, and Marion Smith, one of the south's leading attorneys, yesterday were appointed by Mayor LeCraw as chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of a local labor mediation board.

Both have accepted and they have been endorsed by labor leaders. The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is to designate six members representing the employers, with the Atlanta Federation of Trades selecting five members from the employee group. After the board is organized, a panel will be formed with CIO nominations to handle affairs affecting their members, LeCraw said.

Several weeks ago, Albert Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, approached LeCraw proposing creation of a board to adjust differences between employers and employees. The matter has been incubating since that time.

Heart Attack Fatal to Fire Chief at Athens

E. F. Lester, Newly Elected Head of Association, Dies.

ATHENS, Ga., June 20.—(P)—Fire Chief E. F. Lester who Wednesday was elected president of the Southeastern Association of Fire Chiefs, at Jacksonville, Fla., died unexpectedly here early today after a heart attack.

A member of the Athens fire department 28 years, Lester had been chief since December, 1929. He was a trustee in the Elks club, chairman of the Empty Stocking Fund and president of the Newton Bible class of Central Presbyterian church.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Guy Lester, a member of the local fire department, and Jim Lester, of Little Rock, Ark.

Compensation Law To Be Explained

The state Labor Department announced yesterday a series of meetings would be held in south Georgia next week to explain amendments to the unemployment compensation law, adopted at the last session of the legislature.

Open to the public, the meetings will be designed to clarify particularly the means by which employees may reduce their contributions from the unemployment fund.

The scheduled meetings are: Monday, Brunswick; Tuesday, Waycross; Wednesday, Valdosta; Thursday, Thomasville; and Friday, Bainbridge. The meetings will be held in the county court-houses and start at 8 p. m.

Dr. Henderson Proposes 'Physically Fit Program'

Dr. Matt W. Henderson, of Atlanta, president of the American Osteopathic Society of Proctology, proposed in Philadelphia yesterday a "back to health and physical fitness program" for the United States as "essential to the success" of national defense.

He told the society's convention that "less than half of Americans are at the moment physically fit to do our proper parts in the national defense."

Chester Appointed To Health Office

The first step toward establishment of a merit system in the State Health Department was announced yesterday by Director T. F. Abercrombie.

He said he had appointed Harry M. Chester, of Atlanta, as supervisor of personnel examinations. Chester, he added, has been engaged in similar work for Atlanta.

Dr. Abercrombie said classifications for employees would be established and then a call made for applicants to stand examinations. Federal law requires that each state must have started a program for establishment of a merit system in its health department by July 1 if it is to receive federal funds.

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 21, 1941.

The R. A. F. Is Busy

For more than a week the R. A. F. has been "blitzkrieging" the Ruhr valley and the French invasion ports. Two hundred bombing planes a night have, in seven nights, dropped more than 2,000 tons of bombs upon Germany's greatest industrial region and upon the French coast.

Undoubtedly there is a reason behind this accentuation of night bombing by the British. The public can, reasonably, guess that the British have information that indicates the long-threatened invasion attempt is about to be made by Hitler. And there is possibility that, by this concentration of bombing fury, the R. A. F. may once again defeat the potential invaders even before they dare the Channel or the North Sea.

It is now known that to the great work of the R. A. F. alone Britain owed defeat of earlier invasion plans, almost a year ago.

This time, as British planes by the hundreds roar over the Channel on their nightly missions of destruction, there are American-built bombers among them. The British have acclaimed these American ships as among the best ever flown in Europe.

And, as more and more new bombers roll off the production lines in this country and are delivered in Britain, greater and greater will become the punishment inflicted upon the war targets of Germany. We are witnessing, now, a foretaste of that terrific assault by air that will come in a few months, when the air power of Britain, made overwhelming by American-made planes, will subject the home land of the Nazis to such a blasting they will wonder why they were ever so foolish as to play cat-paws to Hitler's dreams of world conquest.

In the meanwhile the recently announced radio protective device around Britain may be the explanation why the Luftwaffe has refrained, for so long, from air attacks in force against the British.

In the northwest, an editor does the handsome thing in apologizing for omitting the bridegroom's name from a wedding notice. It is also omitted from the apology, but you can't have everything.

A Chance To Help

The British government, through its embassy at Washington, is seeking thousands of American volunteers to accept civilian posts of technical importance in the defense of Britain. This action is taken with the full approval of the United States government.

Offices will be opened in New York. Men wanted are between 18 and 50 years of age, thoroughly skilled as radio technicians, electrical technicians, instrument makers and repairers, skilled engine fitters and metal workers, machine toolsetters and operators, motor mechanics and engine room repairmen. All who volunteer and are accepted will be sent to England where they will receive free lodging, board and uniforms and wages of $24.12 a week for ordinary workers and $38.65 a week for foremen.

The opening of this British recruiting program provides opportunity for thousands of Americans who have longed for a chance to contribute their individual share to the great struggle for freedom raging over Britain and Europe. It is to be hoped that as a result of these men going to Britain there will be no aggravation in any shortage of skilled labor for the defense program here. But, at that, the work to be done in Britain is more urgently vital to victory.

It is understood that the greatest need for trained workers is for men who can operate the recently announced radio defense device which is credited with keeping night bombers away from Britain. The British government wants to put many thousands of these devices into operation and it needs trained men, capable of learning the intricacies of the new device quickly, to handle them. It is one of the most vital and important jobs awaiting the doing in Britain's war effort of today.

From Tyre to Sidon.

Up the road from Tyre to Sidon a polyglot army is marching. British, French, Indian, Arab, Aussie and New Zealand troops have moved in to take over the French mandate of Syria.

Thus far the Germans and the Italians have not put in an appearance. Unbound by moral obligations, they do not make the mistake of the British in Norway and Belgium. Without command of the air they know that the vaunted might of German troops would be as naught, and it is to be expected they will strike only in isolated engagements, solely as a harassing force.

Hitler cannot now afford the psychological rebound of a defeat anywhere in the land warfare. Such a defeat would be a deeply-felt blow in a country the morale of which has been propped solely by military victory and seemingly invincible legions.

It is hinted that Hitler plans to move a million men with necessary equipment into the Lybian campaign. If he does, he will indeed have proved a miracle man. England with the lush valleys and deltas of the Nile has not and will not be able to muster such a force in the African arena, and Hitler with nothing but miles of desert broken only by small strips of semi-fertile land along the coast could hardly be expected to risk any such force to disaster. Even the quarter-million troops of Italy which garrisoned Libya and Tripoli before the disaster that struck them last fall had to be supplied with water and other necessities from Italy, and so long as the British hold Alexandria, British submarines at least will be able to strike the lifeline across the Mediterranean from Italy.

This is not to say that the British position could not be desperate. It is, yet it is not necessarily fatal. Germany still could move troops through Turkey, peacefully or otherwise. Germany still could put sufficient pressure on Russia to obtain a route to strike at Iran (Persia) and Iraq. The Lybian forces may be strong enough to carry out an offensive toward Suez. The British have a desperately long supply line and lack mechanized equipment. Submarines evidently are operating in force in the South Atlantic, through which British and American supplies must pass. It is the old story. If Britain can hold out long enough, in the Middle East as in England, the battle can be won if America does her share.

July 1 is just ahead, and it might be funny to wish your Uncle Sam a happy new fiscal year, but not very.

Cotton Empire Long Dead

The people of Georgia were told recently "the whole cotton empire is going to receive another terrific blow" when the war is done. The people of Georgia still are being told there is a cotton empire when in truth it collapsed years ago. To preach that the aftermath of war is going to mean disaster is almost as disastrous as preaching that this country will lose the war.

This country will not lose the war. Neither should it lose the peace. Yet it will, if this doctrine of scarcity necessarily following the war is drilled into the people. The end of the war will open untold possibilities to the people of this country. In that peace, cotton has its place. It never again will be the dominant factor in southern economy. In other countries it is grown for less and is better baled for less. The only means by which it can profitably affect southern economy is in preparing for a broadening of the whole base of the national economy.

King Cotton is dead. Yet cotton for some time will dominate southern agricultural thought. It is inevitable until science and education and industry catch up with the world outside. But the world of tomorrow must be an expanding world and to speak of disaster after the war is to doom the world to a slow strangling of civilization. We must look forward. Our yesterdays are dead!

Georgia Editors Say:

FREE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.
(From The Brunswick News.)

The board of regents of the University System, in refusing to carry out a gubernatorial whim to remove Walter D. Cocking as dean of the University of Georgia's School of Education, has performed a distinct service to the people of this state. It is regrettable, however, that the vote by which the services of dean Cocking were retained was favorable by only one ballot.

Dean Cocking has a long and distinguished career of educational service in Georgia and it would have been regrettable to see the state lose his talents. Mr. Cocking is a man of high character and would have been to the educational system of this state to sink deeper into the mire of politics.

The effort to oust Dean Cocking points up a very serious question which should arouse all Georgians. This is particularly so when one considers the dictatorial manner in which the Governor jammed David "Red" Barron, the former football player, down the throats of Georgia Tech students over their vigorous protests.

The rightful wrath which Georgians should feel is well summed up by the Bartow Herald, which declares:

"There is no justification, in any government of the people—a democracy, for the muzzling of its schools and what they teach. There can be no justification for the firing of the head of a state institution, or any of its faculty, simply because such head or member of its faculty voted against the current administration in power. If what is to be taught in our schools is to be dictated by political factions or political interests, then this is no longer a democracy."

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS AND KENNETH G. CRAWFORD.

SENATE LEADERSHIP WASHINGTON, June 20.—It was not generally noted at the time, but one of the consequences of President Roosevelt's appointment of Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, to the Supreme Court is to impose a heavy drain on the majority leadership in the upper chamber.

Long a powerful aid to the administration in the chamber, Senator Byrnes' appointment comes at a time when three of the main Democratic wheelhorses in the senate, including the majority leader, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, are away on enforced absence because of illness. Both Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the banking and currency group, have been incapacitated and away from their offices practically since the beginning of the session. Along with the South Carolina senator, they, in previous sessions at least, have constituted the nucleus of support given the majority leader in running administration affairs on the floor.

Neither Senator Harrison, who has just undergone a major surgical operation in a Washington hospital, nor Senator Wagner, now convalescing at his New York home, is expected to be able to resume his duties this session.

Taken in conjunction with the Byrnes appointment, this means that a heavier burden than ever will be shifted to the shoulders of Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, who since patching up his "pure" relationships with the President is being relied on more and more as one of the chief administration collaborators in the senate. Already serving as chairman of the important Foreign Relations Committee and acting chairman of the equally influential Finance Committee, due to Senator Harrison's illness, the Georgian has shouldered responsibility with Senator Byrnes as acting leader since the beginning of Senator Barkley's absence several weeks ago.

STRANGE CASE It is one of the strangest cases in senate history that Senator George should today find himself in such a strong position of administration leadership only three years after the President made a determined effort to purge him from the ranks of the New Deal party. The circumstances of the Byrnes appointment and the illness of the others make his position all the more emphasized.

The senate leadership situation today is made more acute by the fact that the other Democratic members of the chamber many are either unfriendly to the foreign policy of the administration or belong to the so-called conservative group. In the first classification fall such senators as Clark, of Missouri; Wheeler, of Montana, and Walsh, of Massachusetts—all party stalwarts who have bitterly fought the President's foreign policy and continue to do so.

Obviously the responsibility of leadership could not be entrusted to them when questions of foreign policy and national defense are the main order of the day. In the second category are senators like Tydings, of Maryland, and Byrd, of Virginia, who while supporting the administration's foreign policy are completely out of sympathy with the economic philosophy of the New Deal. In the case of Senator Tydings, he, too, was one of the "purgees" of the 1938 campaign, but unlike Senator George he has not yet made his peace with the President—at least not as much so. Now well in his eighties, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, another conservative Democratic wheelhorse, is manifestly beyond the age to render effective active leadership, even if his economic concepts did not clash so severely with the New Deal.

Among the younger contingent of Democratic senators—men like Lucas, of Illinois; Brown, of Michigan; Hill, of Alabama; and Pepper, of Florida—none has seen service in the chamber long enough to give the necessary seasoned qualities of leadership.

EXPLAINS DELAY All of this explains in a way the long delay permitted by President Roosevelt before naming Senator Byrnes to the Supreme Court and the failure of the South Carolinian thus far to take the oath of his new office. His appointment had been anticipated ever since Mr. Justice McReynolds retired several months ago. As it is he is not expected to go on the bench until Senator Barkley returns to Washington. Although the majority leader is now reported to be in improved physical condition his doctors have ordered him to take a two-week trip for a rest before resuming his official duties. Senator Byrnes may be free to clothe himself with the robes of the high tribunal then, or may wait until August.

The responsibilities of Senator George as chairman of foreign relations and acting chairman of the finance committee, the latter involving the necessity of whipping into shape and directing final passage of the new $3,000,000,000 tax bill now being drafted by the administration, are such that he cannot well take on the added burden of assisting the majority leadership. Both committee chairmanships are more than one-man jobs within themselves. That is why senate rules forbid one member to hold more than one full-time chairmanship at a time.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Comparative Values.

The experienced news editor knows there are many factors which enter into the reader interest of any story. Not the least important of these is proximity. An event taking place in your own town, just a few blocks away, is always far more interesting than would be the same event happening in some city 1,000 miles distant.

Another factor which enters into some stories is the advance "build-up." When the public has been keyed to the "agony" stage by expert advance publicity, there is, naturally, far more excitement over the eventual happening, whatever it may be.

All of which is my introduction to a few comments on Atlanta reactions to the heavyweight fight of Wednesday night last, between Joe Louis and Billy Conn. I saw a nice young girl of 18, who had listened to the radio broadcast, close to tears when Conn was knocked out. Later she was so mad about the outcome she insisted there was something phony about the knockout.

At lunch, on Thursday, all the conversation from neighboring tables centered about the fight. Everyone who visited in my office had to ask my views and reactions to it—of which I have none save that 25 pounds in weight is too much to give away before a fighter like Louis, even if he is slipping.

And I couldn't help, all day Thursday, making some comparisons between this excitement over a ring fight between a couple of professional pugs, and the lack of excitement over fights between thousands of fellows like us, a few thousand miles away. Fights which are determined by the Referee Death and upon whose outcome depends not only yours, and mine, but the freedom and the decent life of folks all around the globe.

200,000 Die in China.
There was far more disappointment, I believe, over the failure of Conn to win his fight than there is when Chinese defenses fail and Japanese bombers bring death to thousands of helpless human beings in some crowded Chinese city.

Our hearts bleed for a youth who was well paid to take a prize ring battering, and it is awfully hard to extract a dollar or two for the benefit of 200,000 innocent orphaned Chinese children.

We read in our paper, with no more than passing glance, a headline which tells of fearful destruction and death rained upon some European city from the skies. We can't spare time to read it carefully, for we're searching for the sports section and the round by round description on the Louisville fight.

That two-man fight is more important to us, judging by reactions, than the sinking of a British ship and drowning of its entire personnel of hundreds.

It actually seemed in Atlanta Wednesday night as though lots of folks would have been willing for Hitler to take the Mediterranean in exchange for a Conn victory over Louis.

Calloused By Usage.

Yet who can blame a public which has become calloused to the news of war tragedies by years of repetition? The shock of an ocean torpedoing today is far less than was that of the Athenia, the day we was declared.

Too much horror dulls the perceptions and we lose interest in horrors that have become familiar. And, too, the human heart, or spirit, can stand only so much horror and disgust. Beyond that point it becomes numb and, when the daily paper comes, finds surprise from a world distraught in the fairy-tale world of the comic strips.

Just as a kindly Providence so arranged things that humanity only has to stand a certain degree of pain before God's anesthesia of unconsciousness comes, so, perhaps, the same Providence has provided that we can absorb only so much horror, so much hatred, so much fear, before our emotions become calloused and react no more.

But, still, I can't see wherein victory or defeat for Joe Louis matters one iota to the world, or to me. Whereas victory or defeat in the fight now raging all around Europe and Northern Africa will make a difference between life or death for you and for me and for all of us. Or, if not death, a life that won't be worth the living—if Hitler conquers.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Wednesday, June 21, 1916:

"Washington, June 20.—The issue of war or peace with Mexico hung in the balance tonight, awaiting General Carranza's decision as to the course he will pursue."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Sunday, June 21, 1861:

"See the card of Dr. Smith in the Billville Banner. The doctor has moved his office next to the cemetery, in the undertaker's establishment. This will be a great convenience to his patients."

He Volunteers at 72.

Despite his 72 years, Steven Caulfield, of Paarl, South Africa, hopes to get into the army. He has tried several times to enlist, only to be turned down because of his age. "I'll try again," he says. Caulfield, who is Irish, has been in most wars of the last 50 years.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

A New Method

NEW YORK, June 20.—In a recent essay my admired colleague, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt wrote that, desiring to know something about the situation of the Navajos, she asked Mr. John Collier, of the Office of Indian Affairs, to come in late in the afternoon to give her a tell.

That was a method I had never thought of, having been fetched up in the old-fashioned newspaper practice whereby the reporter, when he wants to know, puts on his hat and goes over to the place where the guy is and hangs around until the fellow finds a little wedge of time between his regular appointments. But never mind to reject new ideas, whatever their source, just because they are new ideas, and, although I have shaken off not a few of Mrs. Roosevelt's ideas, I think this one possessed charm, simplicity, directness and the probabilities of a handsome payoff in the way of results.

Well, there were a lot of things concerning which I wanted various authorities to tell me something, and the first was the Communist thing in the New York subway situation. So I got on the phone to the office of our noted mayor and told the girl who I was and said, "I wish you would ask the mayor to drop in late this afternoon and explain some things to me."

There was a small squawk of alarm or astonishment—I wouldn't know which—accompanied by a sort of thump as of a falling body, and I heard a man's voice say: "Watsa matter, Nelly? Did someone insult you on the phone? Leave me talk to the louse."

Ought To Know Better

So he got on the phone, and I said: "I didn't insult the lady; I just told her to tell Butch to drop in late this afternoon to give me a tell about the Communist thing in the subway, and she lets out a yip, and now here's you talking about people insulting people."

"Why," the guy said, "you ought to know better than that—calling up and scaring a decent, hard-working American wage earner like that, and what is the matter with you, anyway, you crazy screwball? You must be nuts! And will he drop in later in the afternoon? No, he won't drop in, you crazy screwball. You must be nuts, you cockeyed crazy fool, and don't be calling up any more with your wild ideas or I will get Louie to fan you with a bat."

"Louie who?" I asked.

"Lewis Valentine, our valued and efficient police commissioner," he said. "That's who. And he hung up. But that gave me an idea, because there are several things I wanted the police commissioner to tell me about. So I called headquarters and said to the sergeant-on-the-phone: 'This is Pegler. Will you please ask the commissioner to drop in late this afternoon because I want him to tell me about some matters?'"

The sergeant-on-the-phone with some doleful look I couldn't quite untangle, and between gables I heard him say to some other cop, "Trace this one, because it sounds like some nut, and it may be harmless, but he sure is leaping, because he wants the commissioner to drop in late this afternoon and tell him some things, and maybe we better pick him up and put him under glass a while—just to see."

Try It on Governor

Then he turned to me and said I should wait right there and the commissioner would be right over, and pretty soon in comes a man from the screwball detail to see what goes on, and he feels my head, and I have the damndest time convincing him that I am not away from myself at all but just trying out a new process of reporting. However, he finally goes away saying I certainly have got something there if it works and why don't I try it on Governor Lehman? So I said, "I was just going to," and so I did.

Well, at the Governor's office they didn't believe me at all and wouldn't even give him my message, although I told them over and over I had several matters I wanted him to tell me about and I didn't think it very courteous or co-operative of them to brush me off that way.

Finally I said: "Now, look, pals. Mrs. R. is a columnist and so am I, and that is the way she does it and they come on time and pour it out for her, and I guess maybe you don't believe in democracy, after all, if that is the way you feel about it."

Got Just Nowhere

Just the same, that was the way they did about it, so I finally got down to the county clerk, the probate judge and the road commissioner, and they thought I was fixing to give a drinking, and then I said no—I wanted them to inform me on some matters and no grog—they just said, well, if I would drop in some time they might spare a few minutes.

So that was how far I got with that, and tomorrow it is back to the old-fashioned way, with me doing my own leg-work and very sad over the fact that my admired colleague obviously has something that I haven't got.

It's Goat That Pays.

Goats pay with their lives for the privilege of supplying Longreach, Australia, with milk. Longreach is always short of milk. Some people get cow's milk from Rockhampton, 427 miles away. The rest depend on goat's milk. The poorer people have their own herds, which run on the town common and in the streets. As the animals are a nuisance to motorists, every six months all unlicensed goats are impounded and slaughtered. The town council is trying to increase the milking capacity of the herds.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

STEPPING ON THEIR TOES It is a well-established fact that the Nazis do not understand honor or integrity and regard the broken pledge with levity for the fools who accepted the pledge.

This is not at all a wind-up swing at the Nazis but facts from the records. Hitler's pledges of non-aggression began with the Saar plebiscite and continue on down through the violation of the Munich pledge and the attack on Poland, with which he had signed a 10-year peace pledge which had eight years to run.

The Nazis understand just one thing—that is a kick in the shin or a slap in the face.

The President has been giving them the back of his hand for some time. The public has liked it. Yesterday he did it again. Quite briskly, too. That message to congress about our right to use the seas was all right.

The Nazis will understand what he meant. They will fulminate and foam at the mouth. The Nazi newspapers will print lies, saying the United States is the aggressor.

Even if Adolf Hitler does go into one of his hysterical rages and fall on the floor and bite the carpet as he has been known to do, his general staff will understand what it means to have this country in the war.

They don't want it. And even old Benito Mussolini, the captive "Yes Man," will not like it, although he will have something to say. Benito, whom the Indians out west have named "Gourd Chin," after viewing him in the movies, has more courage than most dictators. His Invincibles ran themselves right out of their shoes before the English reserves and the small Greek army. His Invincibles in Africa were chased out of Ethiopia by a handful of English spars from the big show. The Italian soldier has been the worst soldier of the current war. It requires courage for Benito to speak out in a bombastic manner. He will, though.

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS The Robin Moor did not stir this country very much. No one was killed. What did stir us was the insolent attitude of the Germans.

The Robin Moor was far out of the tremendous war zone put down by the Germans themselves. It was carrying no contraband. But the German submarine commander sank her anyhow. The fact it violated his nation's pledge of safety for any vessel not in the prescribed war zone did not bother him, nor did it worry the Reich chiefs. That is their way.

The President now tells them, very firmly, we are going to keep on using the seas.

This means we will arm our merchantmen and will, in some cases, convoy them.

It does not necessarily mean war.

The Germans cannot want us in the war. They know, first, the effect on German morale would be bad. They know, too, that the effect of our great flood of war materials, already flowing, will ultimately work for their defeat.

We'd have a tough time of it, if Japan came in, for about a year. We'd undergo hardships and some bombing, none of it very effective.

But, if we go in, it means the end of Hitler.

He must know this. The whole thing is a game and we are very lucky indeed to have a President who understands it. A less brilliant man would have got us into the war a long time ago. Mr. Willkie, for instance (and bless his heart, he's a great guy!) would have had us in three months ago.

Mr. Roosevelt can play the game. He has just kicked the Nazis in the shins.

We may sit back and listen to the obscenities scream about it.

MR. ROOSEVELT WON'T ROLL OVER

The Germans have become so used to having their foes roll over and purr, they can't understand it and take it as an insult if any independence is shown.

They undoubtedly have underestimated the isolationist strength in this country. They probably decided to test case would scare this country back from the position taken. They sank the first ship met. It happened to be the Robin Moor. They counted on this country's hope of keeping out of the war being strengthened.

Their agents have misinformed them as to Mr. Lindbergh's strength.

This country doesn't want to go to war. No country whose leaders have any decency or humanity about them wants to go to war.

I recall the polls taken in this country a few days before Wilson took us into war. The votes were about 3,000 to three against on the proposition: "Do you favor going to war?" Yet three days later we went to war and four days later anyone saying anything against the war was lucky to get out of town alive.

No one wants to go to war. If we do go we'll go as a nation. We may put Lindbergh in jail, as we did Eugene Debs and a few others. This we regretted later. But we'll do it again.

The Germans will keep on until they force us into the war if they follow their present reports from agents in this country. We don't want that, but if they do they will have to suffer the consequences.

At any rate, I just like, more than ice cream and cake, to hear the sound as Mr. Roosevelt slaps them in the face. The obscenities of the Reich are getting on my nerves.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad To His Red-Headed Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

My Dear Louise:

I am not surprised by your new enthusiasm for the "Youth Movement"—with capitals. I thought you would discover it in time, and I knew how it would affect you.

It is natural for birds of a feather to flock together, and we Americans, with our pathetic faith in labels, are quick to hurrah for anything that claims to be on our side.

Poor men love a politician who says he is their friend; patriots join an organization that calls itself "The League To Defend Freedom;" Christians support any cause that uses the word "Christian" in its title; and they do it without investigation or suspicion, no matter how often they are fooled by rogues and used to rake coals for the Devil.

So you, being young, feel a natural kinship with any cause or organization that professes to serve youth—and there is nothing I can do about that, even if I would.

It isn't my purpose to expose or unmask any particular group or organization, but only to call your attention to a natural law.

When people of any class organize, for any purpose except unselfish service, their idea is to get something. They may be justified, and often are; but in any case their purpose is to get something of value from another group or the government—which means the whole people.

They mean to get it, not by deserving more, but as something to which they are entitled—a "right"—which means they expect to get something for nothing.

But that is impossible. Everything is paid for in one way or another. The free hand-out always has a concealed price tag, and the price may bankrupt your soul.

There is an ancient saying, "Whose bread I eat, his song I sing," and another about praising the bridge that carries you over. The old-timers were shrewd, and they knew by hard experience that the masters of this world give nothing without taking more in return.

Checking out day in Atlanta hotels. For the 6,000 Kiwanians or those who stayed in hotels. They were plenty.

They were checking out Thursday as I strolled through the lobbies. Footsore and weary and evidently glad to be homeward bound.

It was easy to spot those whose automobiles were waiting to be packed with luggage, including newly acquired souvenirs.

Visitors bound for the railway stations were neatly dressed as if for a shopping tour. But the motorists, perhaps starting on a 2,000-mile journey, had "made themselves comfortable."

Men in sport shirts and slacks. Or just shirtsleeves and ancient pants. A long road trip is tough on clothes.

Women in slacks or cotton dresses. Bandana handkerchiefs—"head rags" covering their hair. Little lipstick and less rouge.

They were a tired lot—and some of them cross and snappy—to husbands and wives. The children looked even more tired than their parents. And they faced a tough journey—in the back seat surrounded and perhaps covered by luggage.

"How's the tip situation today?" I asked a bell hop.

"Mighty poorly," he said. "Al-ways is on the day they check out."

"They feel mighty magnificent when they come in and I tote the bags up to their rooms. And for the first couple of days. After that the tips kinder slow down. A dime where it used to be a quarter."

"Take today, now. Time a man has paid his bill and counted up what he's got left he gets to thinkin' about how much money he's spent and how much it will cost to get home. He don't want me to tote his bags or help pack his car. He thinks a lot of that quarter today."

Surprising Climate. I chatted with a number of them who wore badges of many states. Naturally the question was: "Did you have a good time?"

They did. Or said they did. I heard few complaints. Most frequent was about the wonderful weather. So cool at night and in the early mornings.

"We thought we'd burn alive in Georgia in June," several of them said. "But it's been fine."

They're all gone by now. Georgia Kiwanians, who looked after the entertaining, are ready to sleep around the clock and then go back to their neglected desks.

Conventions like this one are fine. For the city, for the hotels and restaurants and theaters. And for the visitors.

I've looked in on big conventions of businessmen who saw no more of the city they were in than if they'd been locked in a cell. They discussed business all the mornings, played golf in the afternoon, drank highballs until after midnight—and few except the golfers ever left the headquarters hotel.

But these Kiwanians, I was told, got out and stirred around. At least, their wives did. And dragged their husbands along when possible.

I've often thought Atlanta is a hard town to show off. When you've seen Stone Mountain and the Cyclorama that's all there is. But convention visitors appear to find plenty to interest them. They see a number of places and things I'll bet you haven't seen—or not since Aunt Minnie visited you back in 1912.

Get the Best. Much as I dislike to butt into politics, I cannot help disagreeing with the Governor about the state's cooking dispute. His printed statement says:

"There are too many professors from without the state, raised up in different environments from the Georgia people."

"We have enough competent, educated, Christian young teachers with jobs, who cannot get a place in another college in another state, to fill our needs."

That smacks of an appeal to the home folks, who can vote. I wouldn't say demagoguery.

It is true that Georgia has a lot of young men—and women—well equipped for teaching—up to a certain point.

But sometimes a specialist, an expert, is required. A man who has had the opportunity and the experience to handle a job better than almost any other man can handle it.

Georgia colleges need the best men they can engage—whether they come from Telfair county or Oregon.

A big Atlanta corporation, looking for an expert to head a department, might prefer a Georgia man. But it would go out after the best man it could find, no matter where he lived. They have found many good ones in Georgia. But not in every line.

We can't build a wall around the state and insist on nothing but home products—in men or commodities.

Generous Offer. Musicians in Army and Navy service adjacent to Atlanta who are ambitious to become bandmasters are offered free instruction by a veteran and expert.

Mr. Garing played for a long time with Sousa and his band. Some years ago he came to Atlanta and became director of the Georgia Tech and Atlanta police bands. He is "director emeritus" of the Shrine band of Yaarab Temple.

"I am now building a band for Camp Gordon," he told me. "Without fee, of course."

Mr. Garing can be reached at Georgia Tech.

Good Morning by LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Sunday's lesson, Acts 15:1-35, and Galatians, 2nd chapter, is the record of the Jerusalem Conference—a decision memorable in the annals of Christianity, the result of which we may well acknowledge as guiding the missionary enterprise through nearly 20 centuries. The International Lesson Committee has very wisely suggested the heart of that decision as the golden text for this lesson: "We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they." (Acts 15:11.)

Following the first missionary journey of Barnabas and Paul, a discussion arose in the church at Antioch in Syria, occasioned by the contention of the Christian Jews that Gentiles must be circumcised before they could become Christians. The church wisely decided to seek the judgment of the apostles and the church in Jerusalem, and, accordingly, sent a delegation of trusted friends, including Barnabas and Paul, to Jerusalem. Sharp cleavage immediately developed in the church at Jerusalem over this issue, a group of converted Pharisees insisting that it was necessary to circumcise Gentiles and command them to keep the law of Moses.

PRESIDENT—Leo S. Gilbert, Atlanta, who has been named as president of the Associated Credit Bureaus of America.

Credit Bureaus Elect Leo Gilbert

Lee S. Gilbert, manager of the Credit Service Exchange of Atlanta, has been elected as president of the Associated Credit Bureaus of America at the national convention just ended in New York.

Gilbert, who has been active in affairs of the group for years, previously has served as president of the southeastern regional organization. He is a director of the Better Business Bureau and secretary of the Kiwanis Club.

Headquarters of the national organization are in St. Louis. The Atlanta succeeds J. E. R. Chilton Jr., of Dallas, Texas.

Members of the credit associations of Atlanta and many Kiwanians will be at the Terminal station this morning to welcome him home and a motorcycle escort will lead the way to his office.

Georgia Pecan Crop Reported As Favorable

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) The Agricultural Marketing Service today described the prospects for the 1941 pecan harvest as "unusually favorable in the Albany, Ga., area, with Stuart and Schley varieties showing the best development."

"More orchards than usual have been sprayed for control of scab, and Schley and other varieties susceptible to scab are, therefore, expected to show less damage than usual from that disease this year," the report continued.

"Drouth has caused little damage to date. In most states it is too early for definite indications as to prospective pecan production. In the Carolinas, conditions have been favorable for the development of pecans."

"In Alabama, the bloom was heavy and trees are carrying a good crop of nuts. Present prospects are favorable for pecans in that state. Prospects in Mississippi have been reduced to some extent because of dry weather, but it is too early for definite indications as to prospective production."

"In Arkansas, growing conditions during the spring were favorable and a crop of at least average size is in prospect. Louisiana pecans carried a heavy bloom, but the set of nuts appears to be light in many orchards. Prospects are favorable in Oklahoma. Moisture supplies are ample in that state and a good-sized crop is expected."

"In Texas pecan areas, growing conditions to date have been favorable. Disease and insects are more prevalent than usual, however, which may result in damage later in the season."

Athens Resident Shares in Estate

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—(AP)—The $2,000,000 estate of the late Hazlett Kyle Campbell was ordered divided among 161 claimants by Circuit Judge Eugene J. Sartorius yesterday.

Campbell who died March 27, 1938, was the last direct survivor of Robert Campbell, who accumulated a fortune as fur trader, Indian trader and merchant in St. Louis' frontier days.

In distributing the estate, Judge Sartorius awarded full shares of an estimated $45,000 each to 18 persons. These recipients included Eleanor Strickland, of Athens, Georgia.

Bomber Hits Ferry Boat, Killing Pilot, Student

TORONTO, June 20.—(AP)—A bomber seaplane taking off the water collided with a ferryboat killed today in Toronto harbor and killed a veteran Norwegian pilot who had joined the British by escaping from his homeland in a German plane he flew to the Shetland islands a year ago.

Killed with the pilot, Lieutenant Finn Kjos, 29, was Student Pilot Trond Hersvik, 22. The undercarriage of the big new Northrop bomber caught the upper deck of the boat and the plane ripped away a lifeboat davit and unroofed the pilot-house. No one aboard the ferry was injured.

Governor Okays Sunday Mill Work

Industrial operations on Sundays during the current emergency power shortage were approved yesterday by Governor Eugene Talmadge.

He said he considered this in keeping with "Biblical teachings," even though a state law prohibits such operations.

His statement followed an appeal for expression of his opinion from the Gate City Cotton Mills in suburban College Park. Company officials told him they had been requested by power company officials to halt production on Wednesdays and Thursdays and to operate on Sundays instead, but that they did not know whether they legally could do so.

Retail Furniture Sales Increase 22 Per Cent

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Retail furniture store sales in May were up 22 per cent over May of last year, scoring the best monthly gain registered so far this year, the National Retail Furniture Association announced today. The association said early reports on June volume are optimistic.

Sales for the first five months of this year were 19 per cent ahead of the like 1940 period, the association said. The Boston Federal Reserve district, with a May gain of 58 per cent and a five months upturn of 37 per cent, led the country in the rate of increase.

Clarification Of U.S.-German Relations Seen

Developments Expected; Nazis Say Consuls Acted as Spies.

BERLIN, June 20.—(AP)—An authorized German spokesman declared today Germany has proof of "dozens of cases" of espionage in which, he said, United States consular officials in Germany gathered information for the British secret service and passed it on directly or through "a certain central office in Washington."

The question of whether closing each other's consulates would lead to a break in diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States was a matter of lively speculation in both German and American quarters tonight.

The general impression was that there would be some development soon, possibly in the next few days, to clarify the confusion in the delicately balanced situation.

Indirectly, said an authorized German spokesman, the American action (the ordering of German consulates closed) "made it unnecessary to respect any longer international usages" and thus Germany's "magnanimity," by which allegedly subversive activities by American officials were tolerated, had come to an end, it was said.

"For a long time already the necessity of closing American consulates had become apparent," the spokesman continued. "We have evidence that information gathered by American consular officials was directly submitted to the British secret service in whose behalf they acted."

Company officials told him they had been requested by power company officials to halt production on Wednesdays and Thursdays and to operate on Sundays instead, but that they did not know whether they legally could do so.

Retail Furniture Sales Increase 22 Per Cent

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Retail furniture store sales in May were up 22 per cent over May of last year, scoring the best monthly gain registered so far this year, the National Retail Furniture Association announced today. The association said early reports on June volume are optimistic.

Sales for the first five months of this year were 19 per cent ahead of the like 1940 period, the association said. The Boston Federal Reserve district, with a May gain of 58 per cent and a five months upturn of 37 per cent, led the country in the rate of increase.

Nazi Consulate's Aid-to-British 'Sale' Is Just Joke on Germans

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—(AP)—"Six-piece white porch or garden set. On display 3029 St. Charles Ave., Jackson 2500. Will be sold highest offer. Proceeds British War Relief."

The address and phone number of this ad, appearing in a local newspaper today, were that of the German consulate general, soon to be closed on orders from Washington. An attache at the consulate remarked "someone is making a joke on us."

Talmadge Protests Drive for Plaque Show Sales Gain

Governor Talmadge protested yesterday the action of "misguided but well-meaning friends" who, he said, are soliciting funds for a picture of him, or a plaque eulogizing his administration, to place in the capitol.

"I am telling all my friends right now not to contribute anything," he said. "I don't want no placards to be put up to me until after I am dead."

A plaque that eulogized the administration of former Governor E. D. Rivers disappeared from its place on the wall across from the chief executive's office shortly after Talmadge's inauguration.

Department Stores Show Sales Gain

Department store sales in the Atlanta Federal Reserve district gained 21 per cent in the week ending June 14, 1941, compared with the week ending June 15, 1940, and increased eight per cent in the week ending June 15, 1940, compared with the week ending June 15, 1939, it was reported yesterday by the research and statistics department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

The report also disclosed a gain of 23 per cent for the four weeks ending June 14, 1941, compared with the similar period ending June 15, 1940.

Georgia Pecan Crop Reported As Favorable

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) The Agricultural Marketing Service today described the prospects for the 1941 pecan harvest as "unusually favorable in the Albany, Ga., area, with Stuart and Schley varieties showing the best development."

"More orchards than usual have been sprayed for control of scab, and Schley and other varieties susceptible to scab are, therefore, expected to show less damage than usual from that disease this year," the report continued.

"Drouth has caused little damage to date. In most states it is too early for definite indications as to prospective pecan production. In the Carolinas, conditions have been favorable for the development of pecans."

"In Alabama, the bloom was heavy and trees are carrying a good crop of nuts. Present prospects are favorable for pecans in that state. Prospects in Mississippi have been reduced to some extent because of dry weather, but it is too early for definite indications as to prospective production."

"In Arkansas, growing conditions during the spring were favorable and a crop of at least average size is in prospect. Louisiana pecans carried a heavy bloom, but the set of nuts appears to be light in many orchards. Prospects are favorable in Oklahoma. Moisture supplies are ample in that state and a good-sized crop is expected."

"In Texas pecan areas, growing conditions to date have been favorable. Disease and insects are more prevalent than usual, however, which may result in damage later in the season."

Athens Resident Shares in Estate

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—(AP)—The $2,000,000 estate of the late Hazlett Kyle Campbell was ordered divided among 161 claimants by Circuit Judge Eugene J. Sartorius yesterday.

Campbell who died March 27, 1938, was the last direct survivor of Robert Campbell, who accumulated a fortune as fur trader, Indian trader and merchant in St. Louis' frontier days.

In distributing the estate, Judge Sartorius awarded full shares of an estimated $45,000 each to 18 persons. These recipients included Eleanor Strickland, of Athens, Georgia.

Bomber Hits Ferry Boat, Killing Pilot, Student

TORONTO, June 20.—(AP)—A bomber seaplane taking off the water collided with a ferryboat killed today in Toronto harbor and killed a veteran Norwegian pilot who had joined the British by escaping from his homeland in a German plane he flew to the Shetland islands a year ago.

Killed with the pilot, Lieutenant Finn Kjos, 29, was Student Pilot Trond Hersvik, 22. The undercarriage of the big new Northrop bomber caught the upper deck of the boat and the plane ripped away a lifeboat davit and unroofed the pilot-house. No one aboard the ferry was injured.

Governor Okays Sunday Mill Work

Industrial operations on Sundays during the current emergency power shortage were approved yesterday by Governor Eugene Talmadge.

He said he considered this in keeping with "Biblical teachings," even though a state law prohibits such operations.

His statement followed an appeal for expression of his opinion from the Gate City Cotton Mills in suburban College Park. Company officials told him they had been requested by power company officials to halt production on Wednesdays and Thursdays and to operate on Sundays instead, but that they did not know whether they legally could do so.

U. S. Air Cadet Board Reports 'Good Business'

ALBANY, Ga., June 20.—(AP)—The Hardaway Contracting Company believes a world record was established at the Air Corps advance flying school when approximately 14,000 yards of concrete were laid in 16 hours.

Traveling Headquarters Now in City Test Four Youths.

The traveling air cadet board—now in Atlanta to enlist young men as flying cadets in Uncle Sam's Air Corps—reported "good business" yesterday at the recently opened headquarters at 57 Walton street.

Dozens of young men called at the headquarters to obtain information on how to become Army pilots, while four youths took the medical examinations.

Army Air Corps officers in charge of the headquarters pointed out that written examinations taken by applicants who have not had two years' college work, are given at specified times and places throughout the country.

FOLLOWING THE WAR... WHAT?

Star Economists Confer on Methods To Save Capitalism, Protect Consumers

(This is the third of a series of articles on what official Washington thinks ought to be done to reform our economic system in order to meet the crisis that is bound to come after the war.)

By BLAIR MOODY.
For North American Newspaper Alliance.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—President Roosevelt is being urged by progressives centering in his own executive staff to use government capital, on a scale never before conceived, to expand basic industry—America's power to produce goods—for peace or war.

Their idea is that a year or so from now, when the staggering program for making planes, ships and weapons really gets into high gear, the strain on existing facilities providing industrial material will be terrific.

Only in a few cases do they expect shortages so drastic that there will be too little stuff to produce the arms we need.

But they foresee that if bold expansion is not ordered now, there will have to be a sweeping diversion of basic goods from normal industry to defense industry that many sectors of the civilian economy, which in the long run must support the whole works, will be wrecked.

And 40 or more star economists, marshaled from widely scattered agencies to nail down the facts by Harold D. Smith—who besides being budget director is one of F. D. R.'s leading trouble-shooters, drafts his executive orders and is his "business manager"—have agreed that even more long-headed purpose behind this drive for expansion.

Chance for Capitalism.

For they see in the fact that Uncle Sam must spend at least $50,000,000,000 to protect the democratic way of life, a golden opportunity to kill another very important bird when the same stone—to revive and reshape the nation's faltering, punch-drunk capitalism before it is too late.

It's now or never, as the progressives see it.

Ever since World War No. 1 our economic system has been reeling up and down and around like an inebriate on a roller coaster. It has, at happy but insecure moments, achieved a temporary lift, but always, including now, is subject to a terrific hangover.

That is chiefly because our productive forces habitually have operated in hobbles. Business has gone on the theory that to make money prices must be high, which prevented millions from buying, cut down the living standard of those deprived of goods, reduced volume and profits, production and jobs.

Farmers, with government encouragement, raised only what could be sold at high prices. They had to, for obviously they could not live in a price world that forced them to sell low and buy high.

In reality, this set-up has worked well for no one—certainly not for the 4,000,000 families (under 500) whose incomes average $312 a year; nor for the 8,000,000 more under $1,000 who averaged $758; nor for the 7,000,000 more under $1,500 who averaged $1,224 or $100 a month. These 19,000,000 families comprise two-thirds or 80,500,000 of the American people.

It did not work very well, either, for the one-third over $1,500—not even for the 2.6 per cent over $5,000—because the bottomless-pit suction of synthetic spending has undermined their positions, too, as it threatens the whole shebang with inflation or collapse. There simply haven't been enough goods to go around or, rather, there hasn't been enough money to take off the shelves the goods that could be produced. Obviously, government spending is justified to tide over an emergency, but is it justified perpetually if nothing is being done meanwhile to straighten out what is basically wrong?

To that one the orthodox business traditionalists, to the last man, will roar a resounding "no," but so far they have not seen the real picture clearly enough to correct it so that government spending could stop.

The capital's keenest economists hold that the New Deal spending of the '30's failed, except as a stop-gap, because it merely put a plaster on the wound, but never went deep enough to cure them.

Economy Rolling.

Now, for an entirely different basic purpose which no one can question, has come a spending program of great enough magnitude really to get the economy rolling in a big way and to keep it rolling if it is managed properly.

At this moment it is the President's choice to lead the country down one of two paths.

He can take the word of those who want to increase industry's capacity to make things as little as possible and still "get by" for defense.

He can chop off from civilian industry great chunks of productive power at the one time when the public is getting plenty of money to buy things.

To some extent, of course, he must do this; but if he chooses, he can now make "scarcity" and "priorities" the keynote of his policy and thus make sure that armaments for defense will strike a terrific blow at our standard of living, and also that the leaders who control monopolistic industry will not have to worry about government or any other kind of competition after the war. They can go right ahead on their low-production and high-price basis and keep on piling up profits—that is, if there is a profit system left in which to pile them.

Can Expand System.

Or else Mr. Roosevelt can choose the path of expanding the economic system so it can produce enough for both defense and civilian consumption. He can take the figures being collected by his economists, which will reveal what productive level industry will have to reach if it is to do both these jobs, and gear his expansion plans and RFC investments to reach that level.

That does not mean, of course, that there will be no shortages or that, by waving a wand, the President can see to it that the country can make all its wants of everything right away.

But it does mean he will have diverted the United States from its aimless economic wandering.

and directed it along the path where, eventually, more of the people can have more of the good things of life.

It means that during the war-boom, instead of having both needs and dollars but a shortage of domestic goods, the national standard of living would leap to heights never before attained and that the money earned and jobs created making these civilian goods would provide a cushion against post-boom collapse.

Distribution Problem.

It means that when the crisis is over, industry will have such a plethora of productive capacity, judged by its old standards, that for self-preservation it will have to tackle in earnest the one big problem it has always dodged—how to distribute what we make so the mass-production system is kept whirling by mass-consumption and how, as a direct and inevitable consequence, to raise the whole level of national income and the goods available for use, which means the standard of living of the people.

There is in industry and government plenty of brains to lick this job, if everyone once becomes convinced it is in his interest to see it licked. But now, as might be expected, there has been kindled against it a terrific backfire by those allergic to change.

President Roosevelt may take their advice. On industrial matters they ought to know their onions. But do they on issues that take broad, business statesmanship?

They were wrong when, with full sway in both industry and government, they let the country spiral, inflate and crash in '29. They ruined Herbert Hoover when they told him to do nothing except sit tight and wait—from 1930 to '32.

Again Badly Advised.

They were wrong again when they told Mr. Roosevelt to stop spending in the '30's, which was proved when he took their advice and precipitated a depression in 1937. This was checked only when he reversed himself at the instance of his particular advisor, Harry L. Hopkins, and Leon Henderson, now price administrator.

The big-wigs bungled again this year when, in the first Dunn report, they predicted there would be plenty of steel for everything, which F. D. R. swallowed, only to cough it up a few weeks later when he was given another Dunn report tacitly conceding the first to have been grotesquely incorrect.

He bit again on aluminum, despite exasperated warnings from New Deal economists, when a couple of big names on the Defense Commission airily told him everything was rosy re the basic metal for bombers, which is now so short that most civilian producers of aluminum products will soon be out of business.

Can this country, if it casts aside such preconceived, pin-headed poppycock, and throws all its sinews into the job, produce enough to defend its four precious freedoms and still provide its 130,000,000 people with a decent standard of living?

Draft Board Reports Married Men More Fit

Married men are in better physical condition than single men, according to findings of the New Britain (Conn.) selective service board.

Out of 26 potential draftees, 10 men failed to pass the physical examination and they were all unmarried. Of the 16 who passed, 10 were married.

Shirer Talk On His 'Diary On Air Today

CBS Correspondent Guest on "Men and Books" Program.

William L. Shirer, veteran CBS correspondent, talks about his new book, "Berlin Diary," when he appears on the "Men and Books" program today at 1:30 o'clock on WGST.

"Berlin Diary," a narration diary form of Shirer's experience as a foreign correspondent during the period 1934-41, is to be published June 20, the day before broadcast. It is the July selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. Both the club and Alfred A. Knopf, publisher of the book, report unusual prepublication interest in the work, and expect it to become a nonfiction best-seller.

Most of the book covers Shirer's experiences as CBS's continental European correspondent since 1937. He reported the Anschluss in Austria, the taking over of Czechoslovakia by the Nazis, the first year and a half of World War II in Germany and the signing of the French-Nazi armistice. Shirer returned to the country from his long Berlin assignment in December, 1940.

VIOLIN SOLOIST PLAYS ON CHICAGO LAMOUR

A violin solo by Orchestra Concert Master Michael Wilkomirski will highlight the "Chicago Lamour" tonight. Broadcast on WATL at 9 o'clock tonight, the program will also feature a talk by Colonel Robert P. McCormick, president of Mutual Broadcasting, and editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, for solo Wilkomirski will offer a beautiful "Chansonette."

Attilio Baggioni will return to the broadcast after a week's vacation for two solo numbers—"Ritmo di Picardy" by Wood and Posso, "The World Is Mine Tonight," and "Soprano Marion Claire will heard in "One Kiss" from R. B. Baggioni's "New Moon" and "Rosary."

Together, Miss Claire and Baggioni will sing selections from Romberg's "Desert Song," including "Romance" and "Song of the Riff." In another duet arrangement, the pair will be heard in "High Jinks," "Float On" and "Jinks."

Under the direction of Herbert Weber the concert orchestra will perform Victor Herbert's "M. of the Toys" from "Babes in the Land" and "Park Avenue Fantasy" by Signorino, modernistic music capturing the tempo of present times.

Gas Masks Outgrown By British Youngsters

A R. P. officials, inspecting children's gas masks in school, found that half of them were beyond repair.

Another one in 10 had been damaged but was repairable.

Three in ten were found to be too small because the children have grown since the masks were issued.

First issue of gas masks to British in Britain was in September, 1938, during the crisis ended at Munich.

More were issued when they began nearly a year later.

Many schoolchildren have grown out of their masks and have to be served with new ones.

Cotton Quilts Suggested To Cover New Concrete

Use of cotton quilts in place of burlap sacks in curing and protecting fresh concrete may be answer to the nation's cotton surplus problem.

The federal Department of Agriculture urged the Arizona water department to try the cotton quilt highway project throughout the state, indicating that widespread use of cotton quilts may literally be the way for a solution of the surplus.

The government owns over 10,000 bales and controls an additional 5,000,000 bales of cotton under the federal loan program.

"Scattergood Baines" fades the air July 1. . . "Tony M. and 'How Did You Meet' will be replaced by serialized "A. of the Thin Man" via Red starting July 1. . . Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The predominant influences for the day suggest attention to your health and being cautious and moderate in all that you do. After 2:43 p. m. financial efforts should meet with favorable results and you are likely to meet generosity and understanding in conferences, dealings with relatives and while traveling.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—You are likely to feel an excessive mental activity today, your dealings with others may be surrounded by irritability, impulsive speech and action. You may want to make radical changes and depart from established procedure, but extra caution should be observed to avoid mistakes.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—An excellent day for matters pertaining to the general public, writing, professional people and politics. Some excellent results should be attained today. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 4:30 p. m.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—The early morning hours and until 11:01 a. m. suggest avoiding haste and losing your sense of caution. Occupational hazards will likely be more numerous and if you are starting on a trip or engaged in work around machinery, use extra caution.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Previous to 11:40 a. m. favors only the lesser matters of life. The entire day is for matters of importance, professional people and politics. Some excellent results should be attained today. The best aspects of the day operate previous to 4:30 p. m.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—Before 9:28 a. m. shun extravagance and be especially careful in handling funds and investments. Between 9:28 a. m. and 7:09 a. m. favors advancement, financial interest, for dealings with women and for matters of art.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—It might be well to give business and social associates every consideration before 8:12 p. m. for you are apt to encounter a let-down feeling, or meet with coldness, which will retard matters. After 8:12 p. m. favors activity whether you use your energies in sports or business, or merely in disposing of the work you have started.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Public matters or dealings with the public where finances are involved, or where it is necessary to use diplomacy, are especially favored until 4:31 p. m. After 4:31 p. m. a feeling of nervousness may incline to mistakes and nervousness. An excellent period to use caution in whatever you do.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—Previous to 9:17 a. m. the influences may incline you to jump into things that you know nothing of, therefore be discreet in all that you do. From 9:17 a. m. throughout the remainder of the day and evening, let nothing hold you down. Encourage all matters that look promising.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—After 12 noon active work of all sorts, ideas that require energy and enthusiasm, mechanical and industrial affairs, should be put into practice for you can go forward with full speed to your credit.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—Before 12:51 p. m. use care and economy in any financial undertaking. Between 12:51 a. m. and 6:54 p. m. you will accomplish more by working alone, as others do not get the proper perspective of your ideas. After 6:54 p. m. and continuing through the evening favors literary efforts.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—The predominant influences throughout 4 p. m. tend to retard progress and completion of things may be delayed, beyond the time expected. After 4 p. m. special care should be used in travel.

Ark Column Wins Maneuver in Tennessee

Armored Attack Travels
100 Miles in Engagement in 12 Hours.

By RICE YAHNER.

WITH THE SECOND ARMORED DIVISION IN TENNESSEE, June 20.—(AP)—A column of armor from one of America's new armored divisions traveled 100 miles and won a decisive engagement today—within 12 hours, ending the tank attack was by General George S. Patton, brusque commander of the second armored division, who ended into the radio phone of his machine: "Push hell out of them—they're running!"

"They" was the valiant Fifth division of Army regulars from Custer, Mich., and they did "run"—but only after fighting up a magnificent scrap against the 350 tanks and hundreds of other armored vehicles of the Second.

The simulated warfare between the two armored divisions, which suffered heavy casualties, the commanding officers of the Fifth and Second Division killed in action.

The armored division's thrust was toward Manchester, 30 miles to the south, where the Fifth theoretically trapped while advancing enemy. Other tanks swung around nearly as far during the night and in their quick blasts from 40 away.

Lindbergh Urges Quick End to War

Says Only Avoidance of Conflict Can Save America.

HOLLYWOOD, June 20.—(AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh said tonight the alternative to a negotiated peace in Europe "is either a Hitler victory or a prostrate America as well."

"I tell you that the only way our American life and ideals can be preserved is by staying out of this war," he asserted in an address for delivery at a mass meeting in the Hollywood Bowl under auspices of the America First Committee. "I tell you that the only way European civilization can be saved is by ending it quickly."

He summarized "the true facts as they appear before us in plain American wording" as:

"1. We are still unprepared for war, and it would take us years to prepare adequately for the type of war we now consider entering."

"2. We would face the superhuman task of crossing an ocean and forcing a landing on a fortified continent against armies stronger than ours."

"3. We in America have the best defensive position in the world."

British Reveal Big April Ship Loss

LONDON, June 20.—(AP)—Britain disclosed today that April was her worst month of this war for shipping losses and authoritative sources asserted that sinkings in the battle of the Atlantic still rose during May, although ship losses for all seas declined in that month.

Germany was said to have increased the number of submarines sent into the vital Atlantic lanes to strike at Britain's supply routes. The admiralty announced May ship losses were 98 ships, totaling 461,328 tons, or 119,823 tons less than revised figures for April. But the corrected April total—581,251 tons instead of the previously announced 488,124 tons—indicated that May figures might be much higher when all returns were in.

The British figure of 461,328 tons lost for May was compared by authorities with a German claim of 805,000 British tons sunk and an Italian claim of 56,000 tons, making "a total enemy claim of 861,460 tons."

Reviewing the British fight in the battle of the Atlantic, the informant said that a number of recently acquired United States Coast Guard cutters "are now at work."

He summarized "the true facts as they appear before us in plain American wording" as:

"1. We are still unprepared for war, and it would take us years to prepare adequately for the type of war we now consider entering."

"2. We would face the superhuman task of crossing an ocean and forcing a landing on a fortified continent against armies stronger than ours."

Pat Harrison Takes Ill Turn; After Operation

Physician Is Greatly Concerned; Son at Hospital.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP)—Senator Pat Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi, who underwent an operation Monday for an intestinal obstruction, took a grave turn for the worse at Emergency hospital today.

His physician and close personal friend, Dr. Sterling Rufin, noted the change in an official bulletin, and said he was greatly concerned. His son, Pat Harrison Jr., of Gulfport, Miss., arrived during the day.

Harrison is president pro tempore of the senate and chairman of its finance committee. The operation was performed only a few days after the senator's return from Hot Springs, where he was under treatment since the middle of March for general "fatigue." His health has been unsatisfactory since he suffered a severe attack of influenza in 1939.

Roosevelt Stand Seen Proper In Washington

Congressional Leaders Back Views on Ship Sinking.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) President Roosevelt's strongly worded message to congress on the sinking of the Robin Moor brought comment from legislators today that it was "a proper position," "a curtain-raiser to a declaration of war" and "we are bound to uphold these rights."

Some of the comments: Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee—approve of the President's stand in favor of maintaining our rights of the sea. I will always stand for sending our ships of commerce wherever they desire to go and back them with the full power of this nation.

Representative Knutson, Republican, Michigan—It was a curtain-raiser to a declaration of war.

Question Involved. Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, acting majority leader—I heartily subscribe to the views of the President and I believe the American people feel the same way about it.

Chairman Reynolds, Democrat, North Carolina, of the Senate Military Committee—I infer from the President's message that he is calling for reparations. There is a question involved whether the Robin Moor was carrying contraband steel rails that will have some bearing on the issue.

Senator Chandler, Democrat, Kentucky—I think the President wants to avoid recurrence of the events that led us into the last war.

Senator Truman, Democrat, Missouri—I agree with the President that it was an act of piracy. Representative Faddis, Democrat, Pennsylvania—I believe his expressions will meet with approval of the American people.

Sound Message. Representative McCormack, Democrat, Massachusetts—The President's message is the proper position he should take.

Representative Jenkins, Republican, Ohio—I am glad he did not ask for a declaration of war.

Representative Eaton, Republican, New Jersey—A sound American message. Of course, it is more step into a great tragedy. But I am not willing to see our shipping driven off the seven seas by anyone.

Chairman Bloom, Democrat, New York, of the Foreign Affairs Committee—The message is right to the point in every way. Representative Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia—We are bound to uphold these rights by whatever means may be necessary.

U. S. To Meet Piracy With Fist, Says Chief

activity by the Atlantic naval patrol was in prospect, possibly including orders to take direct action against any German submarine on the ground that doing so would reduce the possibility of a recurrence of incidents, such as the Robin Moor.

Seen as Way Paver. Others suggested that American naval convoys may be sent out with American merchant ships, but there was an inclination to discount this possibility. Ships suitable to such activity are limited in number and needed on the north Atlantic patrol.

Still another interpretation was placed upon the message in some quarters: That it was the forerunner of some decisive action, now in the making, for which Mr. Roosevelt wished to prepare the way.

And many saw an extremely nasty situation developing, if and when the Nazis refuse to make indemnity for the vessel. Few thought, in view of Berlin's haughty and defiant attitude toward the episode, that it would yield to the demand for reparations.

Several senators immediately asked the State Department for detailed information as to the destination of the ship, its cargo and whether it carried contraband or not. Previously the department had said the vessel was laden with a general cargo for Cape Town, South Africa. Definitions of contraband vary, it was said, and it was indicated the department had no intention of being drawn into a controversy on that point. Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, said the ship's cargo was 70 per cent contraband.

The message began with a recital of the details of the sinking of the steamship, emphasizing that "the total disregard shown for the most elementary principles of international law and of humanity brands the sinking of the Robin Moor as the act of an international outlaw." He continued:

"The government of the United States holds Germany responsible for the outrageous and indefensible sinking of the Robin Moor. Full reparation for the losses and damages suffered by American nationals will be expected from the German government."

Aims to Halt Trade. "Its general purpose would appear to be to drive American commerce from the ocean. When such commerce was considered a disadvantage to German designs, and its specific purpose would appear to be interruption of our trade with all friendly countries.

"We must take it that notice has been served upon us that no American ship or cargo on any of the seven seas can consider itself immune from acts of piracy. Notice is served on us, in effect, that the German Reich proposes to so intimidate the United States that we would be forced when carrying out our chosen policy of helping Britain to survive."

Will Not Acquiesce. "The government of the German Reich may, however, be assured that the United States will acquiesce in the plans for world domination which the present leaders of Germany may have. We are warranted in considering whether the case of the Robin Moor is not a step in a campaign against the United States analogous to campaigns against other nations. We cannot place reliance on official declarations to the contrary.

Viewed in the light of the circumstances, the sinking of the Robin Moor becomes a disclosure of policy as well as an example of method. Heretofore, lawless acts of violence have been prelude to schemes of land conquest. This one appears to be the first step in assertion of the supreme purpose of the German Reich to seize control of the world seas, the indispensable part of that seizure.

Beaver Paying Governor Calls Herman Visit For 3 Regents When Ousted To Quit Posts

General Attends Naval Intelligence Corps Graduation. While Governor Talmadge was busy yesterday clearing the Board of Regents of three members, including the chairman, who opposed firing Dean Walter D. Cocking, the chairman, General Sandy Beaver, of Gainesville, was in New York City attending the Naval Intelligence Corps graduation exercises wherein Herman Talmadge, son of the Governor, became an ensign in the Naval Reserve. The Constitution learned last night.

"The Governor was supposed to be here with me but had to go to Detroit," General Beaver told a reporter over long distance last night, a few minutes before he left his hotel to see Herman graduate.

"I invited Mrs. Talmadge to come with me but she could not," the general added. "I thought someone of the family or someone close to it should be here for Herman's graduation, since he has made a fine record at the Intelligence Corps school."

Effect Appointment. "You know, if it hadn't been for me and my friends in Washington, Herman would have been a private in the rear ranks instead of an ensign in the Naval Reserve," he said.

As to the Governor's letter calling for his resignation, General Beaver said he would have to wait until he got back home to determine what to do. He asked what reasons the Governor had given for edging himself, Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, and Miller Bell, of Milledgeville, off the board, and when told of the Governor's statement about the 1937 law limiting the number of members from any one school, he said, "That's true."

"Why did he pick us out particularly," he queried. He was told Talmadge said they were the last three appointed and again Beaver agreed that this was true. An indispensable part of that seizure.

Aims to Halt Trade. "Its general purpose would appear to be to drive American commerce from the ocean. When such commerce was considered a disadvantage to German designs, and its specific purpose would appear to be interruption of our trade with all friendly countries.

Pittman Letters On Use of Land Made Public

Reports Relate to Working of Acres by College.

Charged by Governor Talmadge with farming his own land with college-paid labor, Dr. Marvin Pittman, president of the Georgia Teachers' College at Statesboro, yesterday sent Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, all the correspondence relating to use of his land by the college over the last several years.

Following are the various letters and reports concerning the matter:

Mr. R. D. Pulliam, Supervisor of College Farm, Collegeboro, Ga.
Dear Mr. Pulliam:

I have recently come into possession of the Hunter farm, which is located very close to the college. On it there are about 30 acres of good arable land, about 10 acres of good pasture.

It is now too late to make any definite arrangements for its operation for the present year. I am therefore going to turn it over to you to be operated in the interest of the college. There will be no charge whatever for the use of this land other than that I ask you to use it to the best advantage for the benefit of the college. Proceed with it in the same basic as you do the farm and pasture land which is the property of the college itself.

Yours truly,
MARVIN S. PITTMAN,
Chancellor Sanford, Georgia.

December 12, 1939.
Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, President, Georgia Teachers' College, Collegeboro, Ga.
Dear Mr. Pittman:

Let me state that I received a letter from you authorizing me to take over approximately 30 acres of cultivated land and 10 acres of pasture on your property and farm it to the best interest and advantage of the college, at no charge to the college for the use of the land.

We interplanted approximately 15 acres in corn and peanuts from which we harvested 260 bushels of corn and hogged off the peanuts with 50 head of hogs. The peanuts provided grazing for 12 head of calves for a four-week period.

Approximately 10 acres were seeded to cowpeas for hay, from which we harvested 402 bales of good quality cowpeas having an average of 62 pounds per bale, or a total of 12 1/2 tons. The hay was sold to the college for $1.00 per ton, and the cowpeas and heifer calves at present market prices the cash value of products produced would be as follows:

260 bushels of corn at 30c $130.00
12 1/2 tons of cowpeas hay at $10.00 125.00
Peanuts for hogs 225.00
Grazing for cattle 12.00
Total $492.00

Since the production records kept from the college farm were not separate, a careful estimate would be a total of $225.00 for labor, machinery, seed and fertilizer.

A total value of $492.00 for products produced and a total of $225.00 for expenses would leave a net balance of $267.00 for the college for the use of your property.

Very truly yours,
R. D. PULLIAM,
Supervisor of College Farm.
Sworn to and subscribed before me this 14th day of June, 1940.

HATTIE POWELL,
Notary Public, Bulloch County, Ga.
My commission expires Jan. 4, 1942.

Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, President, Georgia Teachers' College, Collegeboro, Ga.
Dear Mr. Pittman:

Since the college has been permitted to use the land as shown above that acre of your land on the same plan as in 1939 and harvest of crops is now complete I submit the following report.

Last fall we planted 16 acres of oats, from which we harvested an average of one ton of oat hay per acre, or 16 tons. We followed the oats with cowpeas for hay, from which we harvested 402 bales of hay weighing an average of 60 pounds per bale, or 43 1/2 tons.

In the spring we planted the back 10 acres in corn and harvested 212 1/2 bushels of corn and dairy feed for two months on the two acres of June corn and the cowpeas hay stubble land.

At present market prices we have the following: 16 tons of oat hay at $15.00 $240.00
43 1/2 tons cowpeas at $18.00 783.00
212 1/2 bushels of corn at 60c 127.50
Grazing for 35 heifers 2 months 26.00
at $1 per acre 20.00
Total $1,076.50

Expenses for labor, machinery, fertilizer and seed were as follows: Seed $312.18
It can be shown that the above that receipts of $664.32 less expenditures of $312.18 leave a net gain to the college from farming your land of $352.14.

You have been very generous to allow us to farm your land without cost and we are very grateful, especially so since we have more livestock than we can care for and need possibly support.

Very truly yours,
R. D. PULLIAM,
Supervisor of College Farm.

Mr. D. B. Lasseter, National Youth Administration, Francisco Street Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Dear Mr. Lasseter:

I own some portions of farm land adjoining our college property. I do not understand it and I am unable to offer to give the use of it without charge to the college.

I would like to ask if there is any objection from the viewpoint of the government to my allowing the use of my land to NYA boys who work on other college property participate in the farming activities on this use.

I give to the college. I understand that the government has asked you for an interpretation of the matter. I understand, of course, that NYA boys would have to work on the college property and that the use of such property would be for the benefit of the college.

Sincerely yours,
MARVIN S. PITTMAN,
FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION

November 8, 1939.

Dr. Marvin S. Pittman, Georgia Teachers' College, Statesboro, Ga.
Dear Dr. Pittman:

I have your letter of November 7 asking whether it is permissible for NYA youth on the resident project at your college to the land owned by yourself but the products of which all are used for the benefit of the college.

I am glad to receive no rent or benefit whatsoever from this arrangement and in my opinion such project is entirely desirable.

I trust that this is the information you need to let me know that I will try to amplify my statement above in the most complete manner.

With best personal regards, I am Sincerely yours,
D. B. LASSETER,
State Administrator, National Youth Administration.

NAVY ROMEO—Lou Costello is featured with the Andrews Sisters in "Abbott and Costello and Dick Powell in the Navy," which is the midnight preview at the Fox theater tonight.

Laughs Prevail In MacMurray, Carroll Picture

'Trial of Mary Dugan,' 'The Big Store' Also Are Reviewed.

By LEE ROGERS.

Finding a means to provide laughs among trouble, Paramount Pictures offers the best screen bet at entertainment this week with double-meaning bit of tomfoolery called "One Night in Lisbon," at the Fox, with Madeleine Carroll learning what giddy Billie Burke means when she says "into the life of every English girl, a little American should fall."

I liked, too, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which plays currently at the Rialto. It's not an elaborate screen offering, but it handles one of the best stage plays very engagingly as a talking motion picture, with moderately drawn suspense instead of tension for the whodunit angle.

The Marx Brothers must have made the first part of their current "The Big Store," now at Loew's, first, and must have seen the advance rushes when they announced their retirement from the screen. It is a mediocre attempt until near the end when the brothers Marx revert to old-fashioned slapstick to bring the house down with laughs.

Other films on Peachtree this week are holdovers.

DIALOGUE MAKER BIG HIT IN "ONE NIGHT IN LISBON"

The dialogue makes a hit out of "One Night in Lisbon," current at the Fox. Coupled with double meaning lines to the acting ability of Madeleine Carroll, plus her beauty, and Fred MacMurray and the result is pleasant entertainment with plenty of laughs that make the plot inconsequential.

MacMurray, as a loud-mouthed Texan who is flying bombers to England, meets Miss Carroll, a pretty English miss of the strictly orthodox breed, in an air raid shelter during a blackout and immediately proceeds with his plan of attack.

He meets opposition in John Loder, a naval commander whose family has known Miss Carroll's family since the Norman invasion. The straight-laced, very English old boy performance of Loder is one of merit. He cannot conceive of Miss Carroll even speaking in this vulgar American whose family she doesn't know.

But Miss Carroll, in her reserved sort of way, finds the American very attractive, as does the Lord (Edmund Gwenn), for whom she is wartime chauffeur. Gwenn gives her permission to fly to Lisbon for the night with MacMurray on his return trip, adding "that ought to do it."

"That" was a decoy letter he gave her in an attempt to capture some annoying German spies (headed by Reginald Denry).

Loder follows, taking adjoining rooms in a Lisbon hotel to those of Miss Carroll and MacMurray, bringing forth Fred's pertinent remark that back in the states "the father sometimes comes around with a shotgun, and the Navy never seemed interested." Further complications arise when Patricia Morison, Fred's divorced wife, turns up, and proceeds to invite herself to share Madeleine's bed in the very crowded room.

In a just rage Madeleine screams—quite innocently—she didn't fly all the way to Lisbon to share a bed with Fred's ex-wife.

That's an idea of the dialogue. The plot has Madeleine captured by spies. She is rescued when Loder's English tradition exposes Denry as a spy. The cast handles their parts nicely and Edward H. Griffith has directed a pleasing bit of tomfoolery that will do more to popularize all-out-aid to England than dozens of anti-Nazi films.

COMPETENT CAST HEADS RIALTO SCREEN OFFERING

With a competent cast headed by Laraine Day—looking her most beautiful—and Robert Young, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offers currently at the Rialto a screen version of the stage dramatic success, "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

Nothing pretentious is attempted, but in a very human manner the story of a girl and boy falling in love and their break-up and final reconciliation is told. The break-up comes because the girl has a criminal record she refuses to tell him about. While the boy is away in South America, the girl's kindly boss falls in love with her. Later he is murdered. Young comes back to find her accused of murder and on trial for her life.

Without going too heavily on the courtroom scenes, it is slowly brought out, through the young attorney's work, that Mary Dugan is innocent, and to establish this innocence he traps the real murderer in the courtroom, publicly accuses him and, with a trick, forces his proof.

"The Trial of Mary Dugan" presents a tender love story, mystery and drama in pleasant doses.

MARX BROTHERS SERVE AS GUARDIANS FOR MARTIN

Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx present what has been called by them their swan song as a motion picture team, "The Big Store," at Loew's Grand theater currently.

These Marx zannies are engaged to prevent harm coming to Tony Martin, a romantic singer who has inherited a half interest in a department store, the profits of which the general manager and his cohorts have been self-appropriating for many years. Martin is protected all right, but what happens to the store is something else again.

Chico plays the piano again, with some amusing closeups of his finger work on the keys included in the film footage, and there is one brief sequence with Harpo and his harp again. Despite these attempts to capture again their laugh-getting talents of former films, the humor falls, for the most part, flat until the boys resort to slapstick as they get chased around the store. This is belly-laugh provoking stuff.

With Metro trying to build up Tony Martin, and the Marx brothers remembering hits of music in their first films, "The Big Store" almost-sells out comedy for the lavishness of a musical.

TO TAKE COURSE. AUGUSTA, Ga., June 20.—(AP) Mayor James Woodall said an Augusta fireman would be selected to attend a special two weeks' training school at the Edgewood arsenal in Maryland. The course is sponsored by the War Department to train firemen to dispose of incendiary bombs and the fires created by high explosives.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills Lane Jr. Will Be Honored at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Mills B. Lane Jr. will be honor guests at the dinner given this evening at the Athletic Club by Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Gellerstedt. Mr. and Mrs. Lane were married the latter part of April in Savannah, and they recently returned from their wedding trip to South America.

Mrs. H. Lane Young and her daughter, Mrs. James Frazer, will compliment Mrs. Lane at a buffet luncheon on Tuesday at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mrs. Henry Lane Young Jr., of Griffin, and Miss Frances Young will assist the hostesses.

Miss Turner Becomes Bride Of Mr. Simpson at Church

Miss Betsy Allen Turner became the bride of Warren Creighton Simpson at 8 o'clock last evening at the Peachtree Christian church. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Robert W. Burns, the pastor, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Alan Green, the organist, rendered the musical program. The altar was beautified with Easter lilies and gladioli, and white tapers glowed in candelabras.

Fred W. Sington was best man for the groom and ushers were James Wylly Napier Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., brother of the bride; Julius Lennard, Forest Armstrong and Ben Cotton, of Atlanta.

Mrs. Fred W. Sington, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a heavily blue mousseline de soie, her tulle hat matched her costume and she carried pink roses and delphinium.

The lovely bride was given in marriage by her father, Leonard C. Turner. She was gown in white chiffon, the bodice featuring long flowing sleeves and shirring at the waistline. Her fingertip tulle veil fell from a coronet of tulle and orange blossoms, and she carried white roses and swainsona centered with white orchids.

Mrs. Turner, mother of the bride, wore dusty rose gowns, alpine-roses, a blue felt hat and blue gloves. Her flowers were sweetheart roses and blue forget-me-nots.

Mrs. Alexander Simpson, of Fitzgerald, the groom's mother, was gown in peach-color lace. Her white straw hat was trimmed with matching flowers and she wore gardenias on her shoulder.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner entertained at a reception after the ceremony at their McLenon avenue residence. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake and silver candelabra held white tapers. The punch bowl was encircled with gardenias and white gladioli decorated the house.

Mrs. Julius Lennard kept the bride's book, Misses Elizabeth Simpson and Jacqueline McPherson presided at the punch bowl. Misses Martha Pattillo, Mary Louise Dobbs, Edith Stover, Mary J. M. Albrook and H. C. Phipps assisted the hosts in entertaining.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson are motoring through the north Georgia mountains. The bride traveled in a brown and tan costume worn with brown accessories and bronze ornaments. At the conclusion of their wedding trip they will reside in Atlanta.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. Alexander Simpson, mother of the groom; Mrs. L. I. Wimpsey, of Fitzgerald; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Napier Jr., brother and sister of the bride, and their sons, Jimmy Napier III and John Napier, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Aird and Mrs. Charles B. Holder, of Griffin.

Miss Mary Green Weds Mr. Ripley At Chapel Rites

The chapel of Columbia Theological Seminary was the scene of the marriage of Miss Mary Green and Mr. Ripley, solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock.

The altar was banked with palms and fern and beautified with baskets of white gladioli and snapdragons.

Dr. J. B. Green Sr., father of the bride, performed the marriage service in the presence of relatives and friends, and music was presented by Douglas Wauchope and Miss Stella Rollins.

Ushers were Conner Ripley, brother of the groom; Dr. A. F. Link and Lauritz Jacobson, Miss Elizabeth Cousins served as maid of honor. Miss Dorothy Green, sister of the bride, and Miss Wayne Ripley, niece of the groom, were bridesmaids. They were gown alike in models of white yellow beaded gowns over matching taffeta. They wore fingertip veils of organdy, which were caught to their hair with clusters of blue delphinium and yellow roses. They carried colonial bouquets of delphinium, yellow roses and dahlias tinted blue.

The bride entered with her brother, J. B. Green Jr., by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom, and Allen Ripley was best man for the bride.

The bride's beauty was enhanced by her gown of white marquisette, fashioned over bridal satin. Her full-length veil of exquisite Brussels lace was mounted over tulle and fell from a halo rimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a lace handkerchief, a gift from the first grade teachers club in Atlanta, and her flowers were a bouquet of gardenias, encircled with white satin-ribbon and showered with swainsona.

Mrs. Green, mother of the bride, was gown in green and white chiffon, with a shoulder bouquet of rubrum lilies. Mrs. Allen Ripley, mother of the groom, wore black chiffon, and her flowers were white carnations.

Dr. and Mrs. Green were hosts at a reception after the wedding. Mrs. D. P. McGeachy and Mrs. J. McDowell Richards greeted the guests. Mrs. Charles McKinney and Miss Mary Allen kept the bride's book and presiding at the punch table were Miss Frances Starnes and Mrs. William Matthews.

Others assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Allen Ripley, Conner Ripley, Harold T. Bell, of Greenville, S. C.; Armand Bender, Henry Newton, William James, Jr., of Scrutiny, S. C.; C. P. Roberts, W. B. Barlow, W. R. Heston, Edna Phinizy, Roy Staples, C. F. Edwards, R. A. C. Chinkles, Douglas Wauchope, Douglas Begg, Misses Susan Gardner, Ora Clegg, Miriam Gutke, Cornelia Bolt, Greenwood, S. C.; Helen Boykin, Martha Roberts.

The bridal couple left for their wedding trip. For traveling Mrs. Ripley chose a model of brown and white silk, with a short beige jacket. Her accessories were brown and white, and she wore a shoulder bouquet of gardenias.

MR. AND MRS. WHARTON MITCHELL.

Miss Campbell, Mr. Mitchell Wed at Fashionable Rites

Miss Mary Jane Campbell donned an exquisite model of blush satin to become the bride of Wharton Mitchell last evening at a fashionable ceremony at the Second-Fonse de Leon Baptist church. The dress was fitted tight to the hips, the long skirt extending into a three-yard train. The bodice was marked by a sweetheart neckline and long tight sleeves. The bridal veil of blush tulle was covered with real lace, which was caught to her hair in a cap effect with a cluster of mother-of-pearl calla lilies. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, sweetheart roses and gardenias, showered with swainsona.

The ceremony was performed at 8:30 o'clock in the presence of a large and fashionable gathering of Atlanta society and out-of-town guests, with the pastor, Dr. Ryland Knight, officiating.

The altar was banked with ferns and magnolia branches, amid which were placed seven-branched candelabra and Grecian urns filled with white calla lilies and white gladioli. Clusters of similar flowers marked the pews reserved for members of the two families.

Ushers were Norris Broyles, Langdon Quin, Robert F. Maddox Jr., Raymond A. Kline, John S. Appleby, John O. Chiles, Dr. Lon Grove and Chester B. Blakeman. The groomsmen were David C. Black Jr., of Birmingham, Ala.; E. Dickey Boyd, James W. Dorsey, Richard L. deGollan, Charles H. Everett, Alfred L. Jenkins, of Baxley; Marvin McClatchey, Ewing Miles and John A. Shields Jr.

Miss Eleanor Clay was maid of honor; Mrs. Crawford Rainwater, of Pensacola, Fla., was matron of honor, and Miss Janet Appleby was the junior bridesmaid. The bridesmaids included Misses Peggy Beattie, of Greenville, S. C.; Julia Fleet, Mary Carter, Martha Blacklock, Marie Pappenhimer, Ann Egan, Dorothy Giddings and Ann McGonigal. They were all gown alike in pinafore models of yellow marquisette featuring ruffles from the shoulders to the hems of the skirts. They carried cascade bouquets of purple, lavender and pink larkspur, yellow roses, daisies and white and pastel-shaded gladioli.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. William E. Campbell, who gave her in marriage, and they were joined at the altar by the groom and G. Arthur Howell, who was best man.

Mrs. Campbell, the bride's mother, was handsomely gown in white lace trimmed in rhinestone dewdrops and her flowers were orchids. Mrs. I. S. Mitchell, mother of the groom, was beautifully gown in apple green chiffon and her flowers were gardenias. Mrs. John M. Moore, of Eufaula, Ala., grandmother of the groom, wore hyacinth blue chiffon and her flowers were gardenias. Mrs. William Campbell Sr., of Greenville, S. C., the bride's grandmother, wore purple lace and a cluster of gardenias.

After the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Campbell entertained the wedding party, the out-of-town guests and the families at an alfresco reception at the Piedmont Driving Club. Mrs. Ewing Miles and Miss Georgia Rauschenberg kept the bride's book.

The bridal couple and their parents, Dr. and Mrs. William E. Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Mitchell Jr., formed the receiving line and stood on the terrace before a background of greenery and magnolia blossoms.

The long buffet table, placed on the south side of the terrace, was covered with a white organza cloth and was centered with a tall arrangement formed of white calla lilies, white delphinium and gardenias. At either end of the table was a plateau of similar flowers. The table appointments were crystal.

Later in the evening, Mr. Mitchell and his bride left Miami and will go by clipper to Havana, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside at 1586 West Peachtree. The bride traveled in luggage tan and white silk print and a brown linen coat. Her accessories were white and her flowers were white orchids.

MARIETTA, Ga., June 20. Miss Sarah Addison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Addison, of Blackwells, was married June 1 to James Reece, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hal Reece, of Marietta. Dr. O. E. Rutland, pastor of the First Baptist church, read the marriage service in Rome.

The bride wore a costume suit of powder blue with white hat and blue accessories. Mr. and Mrs. William Abernathy were the only attendants. After a honeymoon the couple is residing with the groom's parents on Cherokee street.

The bride attended the University of Georgia. The groom attended Toccoa Falls Institute.

Miss Elizabeth Black Weds Mr. Campbell in New York

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 20. The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Blacklock Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Black Jr. and Peter Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Colleen C. Campbell, of Hyannis, Mass., was solemnized here this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Eugene C. Carder at Riverside chapel in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of relatives and friends.

Stately palms and white flowers formed the effective background for the bridal tableau, and pews for relatives and close friends were marked with white flowers and white ribbons. William Gardner, of Cranford, N. J., was best man for the groom.

Ushers were Charles A. S. Micaud, Brunswick, Maine; Eugene R. Black III, brother of the bride; Heman Chase, Provincetown; Louis F. Eaton, Brockton; Robert P. Jordan, West Newton, and Joseph S. Wesley Jr., Worcester, Massachusetts.

Miss Julia Black Wellborn, of Piedmont, Ala., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore yellow organza and carried yellow African daisies. Her yellow heart-shaped hat was an off-the-face model. Mrs. Charles Micaud, matron of honor, was dressed like Miss Wellborn and carried similar flowers.

Bridesmaids were Misses Marian S. Mooney, Manchester, N. H.; Nancy Newbold Wolf, Wyncote, Pa.; Sheila Chase, Provincetown, Mass., and Jane Treseder, of New York, formerly of Atlanta. They wore green organza dresses with matching hats and carried yellow African daisies.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by her father, Eugene R. Black, with whom she entered the chapel. Her cream-colored satin dress featured a square neckline outlined with a lace collar, and the long sleeves reached to her hands. The tulle veil was fastened to her hair with a becoming tulle headband and she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Black, mother of the bride, wore a dark blue dress trimmed with pale blue clips and her earrings matched the clips. Mrs. Campbell, mother of the groom, was gown in blue.

Mr. and Mrs. Black entertained at a reception after the ceremony at their home at 7 Gracie Square. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell will reside at 12 Ware street in Cambridge, Mass., at the conclusion of their wedding trip. The bride traveled in an ice blue dress and jacket, a turquoise blue hat and white accessories.

Out-of-town guests were Miss Sheila Chase and Heman Chase, of Hyannis, Mass., cousins of the groom; Miss Julia Black Wellborn, Mrs. Walter Wellborn, Mrs. Eugene R. Black Sr., H. Grady Black, H. Grady Black Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Pugh, all of Atlanta.

Proper Control of Weight Plus Regular Exercise Will Normalize the Bust

By Ida Jean Kain.

Women no longer expect something for nothing when it comes to slimming. The blithe guarantee that they can reduce with no effort, no diet and no exercise just makes them wonder what's the catch.

The reason I know you have developed a healthy streak of skepticism is by the questions you have stopped asking. One of the favorite quizzes used to be whether the application of a little magic lotion would not help to reduce—or to develop—the bust. And yet there is the keenest interest in means of improving this measurement.

With excessive overweight or extreme underweight, the first step toward normalizing the bust is to normalize the weight. These tissues are peculiarly susceptible to fatty deposit. The contour is just as greatly affected when weight and vitality are below par. An improvement in either direction usually shows first in this area.

If you are more than 10 per cent overweight, a general reduction will make a marked difference in the bust circumference. But when the fatty deposit has been excessive, there is an increased tendency toward sagging. As the weight is lowered, exercise is highly important.

The too thin, flat-chested girl benefits most from a build up in weight and vitality. When the weight is normal and the chest is flat, a routine to improve the posture and to develop the chest is needed. As a matter of fact, most figures could be improved by special exercises which stimulate circulation and tone the pectoral muscles.

The influence of exercise is indirect. The breasts are composed of glands rather than muscle. But the pectoral muscles form a sheath across the chest and support the breasts. Better muscle tone gives a better contour.

Too many women are over-sensitive about this measurement. The girl with the small bust seems to feel slighted. If the bust is naturally small, you probably look better that way. A neat trick, however, is to trim the waistline. An inch off the waist is as good as an inch added to the bust. You can exercise your waistline down and keep your weight up to normal.

Another cause for concern is the bust which is smaller on one side than on the other. It might be possible to develop the small side with exercise. At least, it would be worth trying. Practice the backstroke—as used in swimming—on this side for four to six months and see what you can do. An immediate improvement can be effected by the subtle use of a bit of padding in the bra.

The new leaflet, "Tone Your Muscular Bra," contains specific beauty measures and exercises which are tops. Please enclose a large, stamped return envelope with your request for this material to Ida Jean Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Preventive Medicine Is Unrecognized

By Dr. William Brady.

In one of your recent articles (writes a correspondent from the Intellectual center of the country) you deplore the fact that there is no teaching of preventive medicine in the medical schools. The clipping inclosed will apprise you of the fact that Dr. ——— is professor of preventive medicine and public health in the medical school of ——— University.

(A. M.)

The item announces a meeting of a business women's club, on which occasion Miss So and So will sing and Dr. So and So will speak. Dr. So and So is identified as professor of public health and preventive medicine in the medical school.

Every medical school has a course in public health and preventive medicine or sanitation—every medical school of any standing has had such a course for many years.

What I deplored is the fact that no university or medical school provides a course of study leading to the degree D. P. M. (Doctor of Preventive Medicine), and as yet no physician can eke out a living in the private practice of preventive medicine exclusively because the public has not been educated to recognize the importance, value and economy of the advice, instruction and guidance such a specialist could give.

This is not tantamount to saying that physicians do not practice preventive medicine. On the contrary the majority of physicians in general practice more and more of it nowadays, though for the most they have to give such service incidentally and without expectation of receiving a fee. As yet few laymen deem it wise to consult a physician unless they believe they have something the matter. Every Wisecrack thinks he knows how to avoid this and that illness, so why pay a physician for such advice?

Here or in one of the "Little Lessons in the Ways of Health" one day I conferred upon myself the degree D. P. M. in recognition of my many years of service as a practitioner of wholesale preventive medicine or quackery through the newspapers if you prefer. Although I may be biased about this, I sincerely believe I have done more good than harm in this service, and if I meet Hippocrates when I go where all good doctors go from here I expect we'll have a good deal to say to each other. I'll tell him his hydromel is not half bad and ask him what he thinks of my fool-proof cough medicine.

Immunizing children against diphtheria, smallpox and other infectious disease, immunizing adults against typhoid fever, administering prophylactic injections of anti-tetanus serum, these are features in every physician's practice of private preventive medicine.

But how many Wisecracks, or for that matter how many intelligent people, consult a physician about dietetic rules or principles to follow for maintaining health or preventing various health disturbances? Very few. Ninety-nine out of a hundred tamper with their own diet on their own responsibility or on the suggestion of a casual acquaintance or some plausible charlatan and in most instances the monkey business itself impairs health.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Religion From the Bleachers, by Everett S. McClelland, M. D. (Cokesbury Press, Nashville). Many paragraphs might have been written by our friend "Ol' Doc Brady"—I am sure you will enjoy the book, if you have not already read it. (F. C. T.)

Answer—I have enjoyed it. On the flyleaf of my copy is written "To Dr. William Brady, in appreciation of his inestimable service to the public. By the author."

Eggs.

I have Ben Told too many eggs are injurious to the kidneys. I like two soft boiled eggs for breakfast every morning. (Miss H. C.)

Answer—That's sheer nonsense. Eat half a dozen eggs cooked as you like every day if you wish. Eggs are health food for everyone—unless you happen to be allergic to egg white.

Betty Field Plays First Nice-Girl Role

HOLLYWOOD, June 18.—Betty Field will play a fine American girl for the first time in her movie career in "Tomorrow's Admirals," sharing top-billing with Stirling Hayden and William Holden. She will wear nice clothes, have a clean face, and act charmingly.

This will be quite a change from the Miss Field's hussy of "Of Mice and Men," her hillbilly character in "Shepherd of the Hills," and her stranded-in-Africa role in "Victory." Her ingenue in "Seventeen" comes closest to her new nice-girl part. But even that was on the caricature side.

Priscilla Lane, who comes to Paramount from Warner's on her first loan-out job, probably will replace Dorothy Lamour in "The Fleet's In." Doty has too many assignments on her film schedule. The picture is a musical, and the studio wants to utilize Priscilla's gifts for singing and dancing.

Wife's Working Away From Home Should Result Only From Necessity

Dear Dixie:

I am 30 years old and have one child. My home is in one town and I work in another, which does not seem to bother my husband at all. We have been married for 12 years and have separated twice. I have worked away from home for six years and only return home on weekends. I never go out during the week. Every Saturday night he gets drunk, and I do not think it is fair to me. I keep our little girl with me. She thinks a lot of her daddy, but he does not seem to care for us. He tells me just stays with my wife for the sake of the child, and I have stood it almost as long as I can. I have tried so hard to help him. I have been true to him always, but I cannot go on this way any longer.

Before I married I had a very dear friend. He is still single and I still think a lot of him. He has told a mutual friend that he would always wait for me and would always love me. I must have some advice as to what to do. I have come to the point where I hate to go home; I am so miserable. Don't you think I need some one to care for me as my marriage has been such a mistake? Must I get a divorce and marry him or just hang on to what I have?

LONESOME WIFE.

I hope you will not let the thought of this other man and the rather indefinite fact that he may ask you to marry him have any influence on what you might decide about your present situation. I never advise divorce unless it is seemingly the very last resort to a marital situation, especially when there is a child. I think the child and her happiness should come first. Unless it has been absolutely necessary, I think you have made a mistake during the past years by working away from home and taking your child with you. No man would want a married life like that, and it is perfectly natural for him to resent you and child. You do not state whether he worked, or whether you had to work to support him. If it is the latter, I would advise you to leave him. If he works and can support you and your child, I think you are making a mistake by leaving him to work. By doing this, you have fallen down on your job as a homemaker. As for this other man, I think you would be throwing away a certainty in the person of your husband, regardless of how unpleasant he may be, for an uncertainty in the person of this other man. What proof have you that he still loves you and wants to marry you? From your letter, it seems that you are getting this opinion second hand. Has he ever told you these things? I do not doubt that he may still think a great deal of you, but, on the other hand, you cannot be too sure that he might not change his mind if he knows you are free. As the situation is now, I do not think your child is being reared in a very happy atmosphere. Perhaps the reason your husband feels the way that he does is because you have moved out on him for the greater part of the week and have taken your child with you. I think, if I were you, I would give the matter a very thorough consideration before doing anything drastic.

MARRIED MEN ARE BEST IGNORED

Dear Dixie:

I go with a married man and I think a great deal of him. He tells me that he has wanted to go with me for a long time. He and his wife are separated and have been for more than a year. Do you think I should go with him? He is a good friend of one of my brothers. I do not think my father likes him. What do you think I should do and what would be the best for me?

THE FRIEND.

Unless the man and his wife are legally separated by divorce, I would advise you not to go with him. Just because he is a friend of your brother does not change the situation in the least and does not mean that you will not be talked about if you go with him. Perhaps, because he is married your father does not like him and does not want you to go with him.

GIVING UP WORK

YOU LIKE IS A MISTAKE

Dear Dixie:

I have had nursing training and a little experience in a doctor's office and I would like to continue this work. I like drug work too, but I cannot get a job. I am wondering if I should keep on hoping to get what I want or try to branch off in some other line of work? This type of work is the only kind that has ever appealed to me but my ambition is about to give out? What do you think I ought to do?

WORRIED.

You did not say whether or not you must have work right away, so I will have to give you a rather two-sided answer. If you do need work, take anything to tide you over until you can get the job you want. Every contact is good and every one may lead to something else.

As for giving up your dream, that would be foolish. How do you think people ever gain success in anything if they give up? The thing for you to do is to keep on working and striving for your ideal job and to keep this goal before you all the time.

MY DAY: New England Trip Proves Pleasant

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

ELLSWORTH, Maine, Tuesday.—We spent last night in cabins just beyond Portsmouth, N. H., by-pass. Several detours, roads in the process of being mended, heavy traffic in and around Boston, and occasional showers of rain, made our trip really longer than it should have been.

It is a lovely drive though, along winding Connecticut roads with many glimpses of small lakes and running brooks. Finally, when we were nearing Newburyport, I had my first good smell of the sea, which is always exhilarating.

I thought we would spend the night in Portsmouth at the old Rockingham Hotel. My first surprise, however, was to find myself on the by-pass, which I do not remember having seen before. It is a good many years since I have taken this drive and it may not have been in existence when I came up last.

In any case, I missed the first road into Portsmouth, and then was lost after turning off further on. I finally reached the hotel, only to find that they had no room. They directed us elsewhere, but we decided to go on a little further and look for some attractive cabins.

As a matter of fact, I think I could almost have reached Portland, Maine, in the time I wandered around the outskirts of Portsmouth. But these little mistakes are all "luck of the road" and, if you like occasionally to wander, you must count on making mistakes now and then.

Eleven o'clock found us settled for the night. Since Tuesday night had been spent on a train, it was rather nice to be in bed with the cool winds of New Hampshire blowing in from the sea and creating an atmosphere which reminded me that June in northern New England is not always a gentle summer month.

I wonder if you have as difficult a time as I have when it comes to choosing books you actually want to take on a brief holiday? I gathered up several yesterday, but I have a feeling that I left certain ones behind which I am going to wish I had. Among other things, I tried to pick one volume of poetry to re-read, and I could not make a choice.

As a result, I find myself burdened with several volumes. When I return, I shall tell you whether my choices were good or bad and how much I actually accomplished of the reading I must do, in addition to what I hope to do for pleasure.

Tailored Dress Has Slenderizing Lines

By Lillian Mae.

PATTERN 4726.

With this trim dress in your closet, you'll banish that "haven't a thing to wear" problem this summer. For Pattern 4726 by Lillian Mae is so classically smart, so tailored and becoming, that you'll wear it the whole day through with style and confidence. The buttoning down the front is slenderizing and marvelously convenient for speedy dressing and laundering. Front and back yoking holds those full-cut bodice lines smooth at the shoulders, with darts below. The youthfully shaped collar, which might be in contrast, too, is narrowed in back for comfort. Notice the smart paneling of the front skirt. The Sewing Instructor will help you finish this frock in double-quick time!

Pattern 4726 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4 1-8 yards 36-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (15c) in coins for this pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly size, name, address and style number.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

The Iron's Hot Sportsmen applaud Zach Cravey's indorsement of a commission form of state wildlife management. But they don't want just so much idle talk. Now they'd like a little action.

There is no question but that a commission, unaffected by gubernatorial elections, is the only salvation of our wildlife.

Ellis Arnall pointed out in his recent address before the Georgia State Federation that something should be done to remove the withering hand of politics. And he went on record as favoring a non-political commission.

Forward-looking, progressive states have long since established permanent commissions and have realized vast benefits therefrom. Forty-six states have availed themselves of Pittman-Robertson funds for the propagation and conservation of wildlife.

In the Georgia State Federation we now have a nucleus of a great organization for good. And since we have the word of the present state director of wildlife that a citizen's commission is the best thing for the future good, let's get something done. In the future let's realize something from our license investments for hunting and fishing.

What's He Waiting On? I have been waiting for Ed Heusser to go ahead and buy Buddy Bates a new tie, or something, but he hasn't made any move, so we'll have to shake him up.

In the last two times out, Heusser has seen Buddy Bates make remarkable plays to save his games. Against Nashville, Bates made the greatest catch in Ponce de Leon history when he climbed a bank to rob Gus Dugas of a home run with one on. The blow would have tied the score. Earlier, Bates had made a great throw to third base to cut down flying Les Fleming. This nipped another rally.

Against Little Rock, Bates came through with a remarkable last-inning shoe-string catch. And earlier he had doubled a runner off first base.

Heusser can't get away with just a "thank you." He owes Bates more than that. And, besides, gratitude doesn't get you anything at the nearest haberdashery or the corner grocery.

Another Friend The circle widens. First Atlanta planned an appreciation night for those country cousins, the Knoxville Smokies. They have been friends in need in cutting down Nashville at crucial times. Now New Orleans seems to have the defending champions' number.

Keep your eye on New Orleans. The toughest competition Atlanta may be called upon to face in the latter stages of the race could come from the Pelicans. Ray Blades is a strong finisher. And he has the sort of club to make a strong finish.

The Crackers command a most respectable lead at this stage in the race, but there are definite indications that there will be a hot stretch fight, involving Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville, and possibly Memphis.

In Short Great honor comes to Auburn's noted track coach, Wilbur Hutsell, in his election as president of the National Track and Field Coaches' Association. And then press services send his last name out as "Hutzel!" There ain't no justice.

Just in case you came in late, Johnny Rucker at last has hit his stride with the New York Giants. He's getting plenty of hits and runs every day. Only trouble is Mr. Whiskers has his eye on the Crabapple Cannonball.

Danny Yates has taken his physical exam and may soon be following Brother Charlie into the Army.

Announcer Harry Balaugh has gone somewhat high-bat. Winding up his introduction of the fighters, Conn and Louis, Balaugh said . . . "And may the better contestant triumph." It used to be, "And may the best man win."

Professor Emile Lochbaum, the Cracker pitcher, calls his shots. He told ex-Cracker Larry Miller before the final game of the Little Rock series that he would get two hits. And he did. One of them was a double.

Visitors Rout Stout To Cop For Ex-Cracker

Naylor Raps Home Run; Ed Heusser Will Hurl Today.

By JACK TROY, Constitution Sports Editor

Lewis Carpenter, former Cracker and Georgia boy, sent the Crackers back into a batting slump as the Memphis Chicks took the opening game of the series, 7 to 2, last night.

Pitching seven-hit baseball, Carpenter never was in danger. The Crackers staged a mild rally in the seventh. Before and after they were subdued by Carpenter's butterfly pitch.

Certain fans recalled that Carpenter is an erstwhile vacuum cleaner salesman and they are now looking for a Fuller brush man to take the mound one of these days and pitch a shutout against the league leaders.

In the early innings it appeared as if Allyn Stout, former Chickasaw, and Carpenter, former Cracker, were going to hook up in a fancy mound duel. But after a flashy start Stout collapsed and both Bob Chipman and Ed Nowak saw action before the evening was over.

STOUT BEATEN. The Chicks did most of the damage at Stout's expense. The loss was Stout's third of the season. Carpenter now has won four and lost two.

The visiting Chickasaws hardly staged batting practice against the Cracker moundsmen, but in the 10 hits was a two-run homer by Naylor and doubles by Rikard and Hodge. Sid Gautreaux's three hits topped the attack.

Of the seven Cracker hits Ryan, Burge and Glock had six. Mailho was the only other Cracker to get a hit.

Ed Heusser, another ex-Chick, will pitch for the Crackers this afternoon. The game will begin at 3:30. A double-header Sunday concludes the series and the Atlanta club's home stay.

STOUT STARTS STRONG. Stout started out pitching in a most sensational fashion. There were only four pitched balls, resulting in three fly-outs, in the first inning. In the second, Stout struck out all three batters.

Piet got on base on an error to lead off the third, but never got past second.

The Chicks didn't get a hit until the fourth, when Honeycutt bounced a single past second. Naylor followed with a home run over the signs in right and the Chickasaws were out in front.

There were three more runs after two were out in the fifth. Rikard doubled, sending Carpenter to third, and both scored on Hodge's double. Honeycutt singled past third, and Hodge scored.

The Chicks delivered the knock-out punch in the sixth, and Chipman came to Stout's rescue. Fugit was hit by a pitched ball. Hafey singled, sending Fugit to third. Piet fled to Bates, and Fugit scored after the catch. After Gautreaux singled, Chipman replaced Stout. On an attempted double steal, Hafey went out at the plate. Carpenter struck out.

CRACKERS GET TWO. The Crackers broke their scoreless streak in the seventh. Burge led off with a double. Glock singled, scoring Burge, and went all the way to third when the ball rolled through Rikard's legs. Crompton fled to Rikard and Glock scored after the catch.

The Chicks scored their seventh run in the eighth. Fugit led off with a single, advanced on Hafey's sacrifice, and dashed home on Gautreaux's single.

THEY'D LIKE TO GET MARRIED—Billy Conn, popular heavyweight title challenger, and Mary Lou Smith did not make an appearance at the Pittsburgh church where it was rumored they would wed yesterday. So 5,000 curious fans were stood up. Later, Billy, apparently worried and irritated, expressed a strong desire to marry, but said it couldn't be right now. Mary Lou previously had revealed her father, Jimmy Smith, had had a change of heart and given the proposed marriage his blessing.

Everybody But Conn, Fiancee Show Up at Church

PITTSBURGH, June 20.—(AP)—Billy Conn kept a date with the Sandman today and stood up Cupid.

Billy and pretty, blond Mary Louise Smith had told friends they'd be married today, but at the appointed hour there was only a crowd of curious waiting at St. Philomena's church. No bride and no bridegroom.

The ex-light heavyweight champion was home in a sound sleep, the first since Joe Louis rocked him to sleep in the 13th round Wednesday night.

There was no explanation of the delay in the wedding plans from Conn or the Smith family. However, Billy spent a couple of hours this morning with James L. Smith, ex-big league ball player, and father of Miss Smith, who first voiced opposition to the wedding, then was reported to have approved it last night.

When the discussion broke up, Billy wouldn't talk about it, but Mary Louise was in tears.

"No wedding today," he said. "I'd love to be married now, but I can't."

One obstacle might have been a church requirement that marriage bans must be read in the church. A dispensation would have eliminated the requirement, but it was not issued.

Billy said tonight he would leave his ring future up to his manager, Johnny Ray. "I'm almost certain I'll meet Joe Louis in September," he added. "Uncle Mike (Jacobs) told me so, and what Uncle Mike says usually goes. He also told me there isn't a ball park in New York big enough to hold the crowd which will want to see the second fight. He says it's sure-fire million dollars at the gate."

Conn Was Ahead, Two Officials Say

NEW YORK, June 20.—(AP)—Billy Conn was in front of Joe Louis at the end of 12 rounds in their heavyweight title fight at the Polo Grounds Wednesday, in the opinion of two of the officials. The third had them all even.

Referee Eddie Joseph gave seven of the 12 rounds to Conn, five to Louis. Marty Monroe, judge, scored them seven for Conn, four for Louis and the tenth even. Judge Billy Healy had them all square at six each.

Rigney Rejected; Physically Unfit

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—John Duncan Rigney, 26-year-old star pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, was rejected today for service in Uncle Sam's Selective Service Army on the ground that a perforation of the right ear drum made him unfit physically for service.

Rigney reported at 7 a. m. to his local draft board in suburban River Forest, then went with other selectees to the Chicago induction station in the 132nd Armory where he was given the customary final physical examination.

Don McNeill Bows To Frank Parker

CHICAGO, June 20.—(AP)—Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., scored a 3-6, 6-0, 6-2 victory over Don McNeill today to eliminate the defending champion in the national clay courts tennis tournament.

The victory advanced Parker, 1939 winner, to the finals, where he will meet the winner of tomorrow's match between Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla.

The top-seeded Pauline Betz and Mary Arnold, both of Los Angeles, won their way to the women's singles finals. Miss Betz disposed of Doris Hart, of Miami, 6-8, 6-1, 6-3, while Miss Arnold, seeded No. 3, defeated Barbara Bradley, another Los Angeles entry, 6-3, 6-1. The championship will be decided Sunday.

WESTERN CHAMP.

AMES, Iowa, June 20.—(AP)—Ben Downing, of Monroe, La., retained his western junior golf championship here today with a 7-and-6 victory over Mark Weidman, of Baraboo, Wis., in their 36-hole title match.

Lawson Doesn't Like Crackers Impracticable To Report, Hurler Says

Roxie Lawson does not choose to report to the Atlanta Crackers. He sent the following wire to President Earl Mann yesterday: "Under existing conditions find it impracticable to report. Roxie Lawson Ferndale, Mich."

President Mann wired back that he need not report "unless you feel like giving your best."

Mann gave Lawson salary terms and asked him to advise definitely so that the matter could be taken up with Montreal. The Atlanta club bought him on condition from the Royals.

"We are not terribly concerned whether or not Lawson reports," President Mann declared. "We have other irons in the fire and may obtain the pitcher we need elsewhere."

Willard Marshall, on the shelf with an injured ankle, hopes to get back into the lineup in the Sunday double-header with Memphis. A quintet of major league scouts is here and would like to see Marshall perform in his sophomore year of pro ball.

Mediators Bring Peace Between CIO-UAW and Bohn Company.

By The Associated Press.
An agreement establishing peace between the CIO-UAW and a concern important to defense production, the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Company, Detroit, was announced today by the Defense Mediation Board.

But in Columbus, Ohio, a strike of 150 AFL electricians threatened to halt construction work on the $13,000,000 Curtiss Wright airplane plant now nearing completion there.

Ross Boggs, president of the Columbus Building Trades, said 1,500 craftsmen would be called off the job unless the electricians' controversy was brought to a "successful conclusion." A spokesman for the strikers said their grievance was alleged use of non-union men to install telephone cables and branch lines.

A strike of sugar refinery workers in Philadelphia, begun Monday at the W. J. McCahan Sugar Refining and Molasses Company, spread to the Franklin Sugar Refining Company. About 1,900 workers were affected by the AFL-sponsored walkout. An increase of 17 cents was asked in the hourly pay of laborers now getting 63 cents.

Officials of the Chrysler Corporation reported some 5,000 men in body frame plants. Groups of workers "sat down," they said, after one man was sent home for insubordination. The UAW-CIO said no strike had been called.

The mediation board announced an agreement in a dispute between the E. W. Bliss Company, of Brooklyn, and the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO). A strike was threatened when the case went to the board on May 27, but the board said yesterday that both sides had agreed to submit the dispute to voluntary arbitration. Board officials said the major argument was over the establishment of minimum wage rates, which were not made public. The company has about $30,000,000 in contracts for torpedoes and machinery.

George Biggers, of the Atlanta Journal, was guest speaker at the Lions Club luncheon at the Ansley hotel yesterday.

Charles F. Blackwell, of Atlanta, and Guy O. Sande of Greenville, S. C., were enlisted in the United States Marine Corps through the local recruiting office and transferred to Parris Island, S. C., for recruit training.

Woodmen of the World will hold their monthly singing meeting at the Western Heights Baptist church at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, president of the Service Star Legion here, said yesterday the Legion will give a benefit musical concert at the Atlanta Woman's Club at 8:15 o'clock Monday night. All Hospital 48 and Fort McPherson personnel are invited.

at the COURTHOUSE

Fulton county grand jury yesterday was expected to have returned two indictments in connection with the raid staged last Wednesday night on the Postal hotel, but the judges had all left the courthouse and no announcement of the individuals involved was made pending formal presentation of the documents in open court. Officers who raided the hotel said it appeared the four-room suite was rigged up for gambling.

E. C. Driver, wheel-chair veteran of the last World War, yesterday was in court again. He asked Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton superior court, to relieve him of all alimony in connection with a divorce suit pending between him and Mrs. Driver. He went to jail more than a month ago when he refused to pay alimony. Judge Moore set June 30 as the time for hearing of the latest petition.

Fulton county courthouse will be closed July 4-5 in observance of Independence Day, it was said yesterday.

Walter Whitfield yesterday was indicted on charges of murder in the fatal shooting on June 14 of Evelyn Martin. The indictment charges Whitfield with slaying her with a shotgun.

Six New Members Gain Draft Offices

Appointment of six new members to fill vacancies on Fulton county draft boards was announced yesterday at selective service headquarters.

Frank Robertson was appointed a member of Board 2, succeeding Paul Chipman; Arthur Spies replaces W. M. Gilleland on Board 5; John Gulenschuh replaces H. W. Drane on Board 6; Dr. O. B. Cawthorn replaces E. H. Elrod on Board 7; Edgar Chambers replaces Joseph Davidson on Board 10, and S. D. Gallaher replaces Dr. B. F. Waller on Board 11.

At the City Hall

City council is expected to award a contract to Stephens & Robinson at the meeting on July 7.

Mayor LeCraw yesterday had a signed statement from J. C. Banks, holder of the original contract, that he would relinquish any claim to the contract in the event it is transferred to the new organization.

A new ordinance to control the Atlanta smoke nuisance will be offered to council July 7, it was announced yesterday. It will provide assessment of sufficient fees to provide funds to maintain the department and to employ sufficient personnel to curb the nuisance, Mayor LeCraw said.

Mayor LeCraw yesterday declined to grant a permit to Southern Spring Bed Company to work on Sunday, advising that he believes that he has not the power to allow Sabbath work in the absence of an emergency. He advised the company to seek the advice of its own counsel as to whether or not it could be done without violating the state law.

Much Construction Work at Quitman

QUITMAN, Ga., June 20.—Quitman has more construction work and remodeling going on now than at any time in several years. The volume represents at least $50,000. Work has started on rebuilding the business houses destroyed in a recent fire. Taylor & Company are remodeling their store into a modern merchandising center; P. Lazarus is remodeling his store.

Many new homes are also under construction, and in addition there are many minor improvements, such as painting and installing heating units which swell the volume of building work.

It is also announced that the Brooks county housing committee has approved six units and that work on that project will also begin soon.

Radio Heads Oppose New Chain Rules

By McFeatters

'Coercing' of Affiliates Charged by Another Executive.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) Four operators of independent radio stations voiced opposition today to the Communication Commission's new chain broadcasting rules, but an executive of a Baltimore station supported the regulations and contended the chains had been "coercing" their affiliates.

Hope H. Barroll Jr., executive manager of WFBR at Baltimore, testified before the senate Interstate Commerce Committee that he had received what he considered a "veiled threat" from an official of the National Broadcasting Company that his station might be transferred from NBC's "Red" network to what he said was the less lucrative "Blue" network because of a disagreement over use of time.

As a result, Barroll said his station cleared time for an NBC commercial program by shifting a local-interest program it had been broadcasting for several years.

WFBR will change over to the Mutual Broadcasting System October 1, Barroll added.

The senate committee is holding hearings on a resolution by Senator White, Republican, Maine, to suspend the new regulations pending an investigation of the radio industry. The new rule, among other things, would bar the optioning of time by local stations to the chains and would require NBC to dispose of one of its networks.

Many new homes are also under construction, and in addition there are many minor improvements, such as painting and installing heating units which swell the volume of building work.

U. S. Places Control on Exports Of All Petroleum Products

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP) The United States today placed controls on exports of all petroleum products in a move which, it was made clear, was designed primarily to prevent depletion of already inadequate reserves in eastern seaboard states.

In an order to the office of export control, President Roosevelt said that no shipments should be permitted from Atlantic ports except to Great Britain, Egypt and the western hemisphere nations.

At the same time, the White House announced that a plan was being prepared for the most effective use of available tankers in supplying petroleum to the eastern seaboard and the other American republics.

The prospective oil shortage on the Atlantic coast is due to diversion to British use of part of the tanker fleet which normally carries oil from southwestern fields to eastern seaboard points.

The White House also said that it was not contemplated that further restrictions would be placed on shipments of petroleum products from Gulf or Pacific ports.

Restrictions are now in effect on export of aviation gasoline and some other petroleum products. The announcement that these would not be extended was regarded as assurance of other foreign purchasers of American petroleum that today's action was not aimed at them.

Talmadge Okays Factory for Blind

A Georgia factory for the blind, located on North avenue in the Atlanta Community Shop, was authorized by Governor Talmadge yesterday as he approved an appropriation for $2,393.50 to cover expenses for the present quarter.

The factory was created by the 1937 Georgia legislature, but has never been opened. It will cooperate with the Georgia Academy for the Blind in Macon and eventually will employ between 300 and 400 persons.

Governor Talmadge appointed Vaughn Terrell, Rome attorney, as superintendent of the factory, which will manufacture brooms, mops, rubber mats, mattresses, sheets and pillow cases.

Members of the board of directors will be Norman Elias, Roy B. Sewell, W. R. Belden, Charles Smyley and A. E. Foster.
